Life Story:

Ria doesn't remember much from her past other than faint memories of her mother and her father. She could only recall being named the heir and the next head of the Roux family, being far too young at the time to claim the title. While she would have to shoulder those responsibilities, Ria would also be forced to pick-up the role as the Bourreau for the Roux family, due to an incident one of her ancestors had committed. The Vampire Senate had insisted that it would either have to be here or one of her siblings take the role. She would spend several years helping the Vampire Senate getting rid of whatever vampire they deemed necessary, earning her the cold shoulder from most vampires. When the War had transpired between the humans and vampires, Ria had been an unwilling participant, unable to go against the wishes of the Senate. The last thing she wanted to do was risk the peace that she had with her siblings, not wanting to risk their lives because of discomfort.

It had been a fateful encounter with Vanitas, a being that Ria had heard so much about but had yet to physically encounter in person.

|| ABOUT HIM OR HER ||

Personality:

Ria is often described as courteous and friendly in general among others, not having much issue with anyone. In a sense, she can be rather laidback and playful with others, keeping a light hearted attitude to her. She does enjoy teasing people, whether it's kept light or in a more playful manner. Ria is fairly curious about others as well, often finding herself asking questions aloud. Despite that upbeat personality she shows, she can be rather intuitive and cunning, often picking up on things quite quickly. However, Ria prefers to keep her observations to herself unless prompted to speak up or convinced to speak up about it.

With loved ones or her lover(s), Ria has a tendency to become rather loving and over protective of those individuals. She has no issue in expressing exactly how she feels or stating what she wants, being rather open with such things. She prefers showing it verbally and through her actions how much she cares for someone. If she truly loves someone, she'll show no hesitation to put them high on her priority list, wanting to make sure she keeps both of them safe in the process. With loved ones, Ria can be rather touchy and highly affectionate, not caring about the high level of pda she is showing. She's often used to expressing herself in such a way, wanting to make sure her loved ones know she loves them.

When it comes to her partners, Ria is much more vulnerable and honest around them. One could say she's even more submissive around them as well. She's much more honest and affectionate with them, not seeing any reason to beat around the bush in their presence.

When it comes to dealing with stress or sudden disruptions, Ria is often swept into waves of small panic, often wanting to fret and lash out. She can often become reckless with decisions involving herself, finding herself becoming rather uncaring and self-sacrificial. It's easier to spot how nervous and flustered she can get when she is caught off guard or simply surprised. She's fairly in tune with her emotions, often keeping it in check, but during moments of vulnerability- she does struggle not to show her inner turmoil.

Good Habit(s): Friendly, loyal, protective, curious, determined, playful, and brave.

Bad Habit(s): No regard for her well-being, reckless, submissive at times, worrisome, open and easy to fluster.

Initially, Ria just had an interest in the one that everyone called the Kin of the Blue Moon, however it had been an entirely different situation once she actually met him. There had been something about his flippant attitude that left her questioning was she actually interested in him or did she want to argue with the man? Granted it didn't help that during their first initial meeting he had ignored her in favor of Jeanne, which unknowingly stirred something inside of the white haired female. It would be until further interactions with him that she finally realized she had been jealous of the attention he gave Jeanne and not here. She could only hope the blue-eyed man hadn't come to the same conclusion.
