Topic Time

In today's Topic Time:

On this week's episode of "The MBS Show" we don't have a guest, so we have topic time instead. So on this week's topic time we discuss "Does fan made content affect the way you think of a character?"

A Quote from Stephanie Tan

"I guess fanmade stuff does make it all the more interesting as it gives it endless creative extension to the character besides just what we see from HUB or rather the actual show.

Tho I wouldn't say the bad stuff really have much negativity tho the good one does. As fanfics like cupcakes emerged, it dint stop anyone from disliking Pinkie, in fact it increased her popularity even more as people start liking the "dark" side of her.

One thing bout people react to things they love, is no matter how bad, they easily forget, and never take it seriously. It's like characters are repels negativity. Like for a while Dashie was quite portrayed as a "bitch" not just from fans but from how the original storyboard potrayed her, but its obvious Season 3 they tried to change that but either way it doesnt stop anyone from liking dashie.

Luna as you said gamer luna attracts people, hey, who isnt interested in a cool gamer girl? What more a beautiful princess? Luna doesnt get much airtime, and she did get what she deserves through fanmade content allowing us to get to know more of her, her personality, eventhough it may or may not be what she really is but it's still more content for us and more interest poured out to poor neglected characters.

But eitherway, yes it makes a difference but negative impact is almost none tho we absorb the good parts like water into cotton candy."
