do you ever just go

I took some time to write this out to make sure that everything made as much sense as I could make it.

Originally I also took some time because of the fact me and Splash had a MLP trade happening at this time that we both had put money in, so I didn't want to risk Anything happening to my package and stuff if I came out as soon as it happened , while I wish I could've spoken out immediately I didn't want them to mess with my stuff. However , after a few days I decided it didn't feel right getting stuff off them anymore , also because they said they'd be shipping it in a month, and I didn't feel comfortable staying in 'contact' for that long (even tho it was just messages abt parcel updates) so I decided to pull out and just send the stuff they had bought and not receive anything.

I responded with “upto you” because after i sent her stuff I would be blocking her, and just didn’t want to respond in a way that let her know I was going to tell people about her actions and risk any arguments happening.

I’ve never been a person who is okay with conflicts and can handle them easily, I’m the type to be shaking and crying while it’s happening, and struggling to decide what to do; in this case, it didn’t feel right to know this information and let people keep buying art from splash/ supporting her knowing they could come from a community that she harmed , I had to convince myself that sharing what I knew was the better choice, due to never liking being the reason someone is distressed.

Along side that , I didn’t want any negative attention or things to get out of hand, I’m still nervous to post this, but only out of fear that there will be the odd people who threaten me, as I’ve seen that happen often.

In the end, it’s only right that I share my story with this creator , so people can know how they behave and form their own opinions on ColourSplash.

Before posting this doc I will be showing it to 2 people who’s comments they affected , so that would be ‘T’ and ‘A’ , and if they wish to say anything I will add it to the end of the Doc.

Originally I had met ColourSplash on a collectors My Little Pony sever for trades and just collecting, when there , a group of them had made a separate group chat to talk to eachother out of the server due to long liking some people there, I was added to this group chat later , due to this I felt out of place and like a friend group was already formed so it was hard to feel included, Splash felt the same way, this meant that we had become closer, Along with another person who goes by ‘Celestia’ who was friends with splash before me.

I won’t mention any others in the group chat unless the actions directly affect the story, just out of respect, and as I have no ill will towards them, or hold any grudges; I hesitated about telling them straight away but as they were also doing trades with Splash and still in contact I didn’t want to risk more stuff going wrong immediately.

I did reach out to one of them to give a small brief , just because I couldn’t hold it inside , I felt sick and guilty, genuinely shaking while sitting on what I knew , especially knowing it HARMED the people around me.

Splash mentioned making another server for us 3 , to which I went and made one for us all to talk in away from the other group chat due to frustrations we had with feeling left out.

In this server we would vent to eachother , just talk and complain about things said/done in the Collectors discord server and the group chat , these started off small such as things like ;

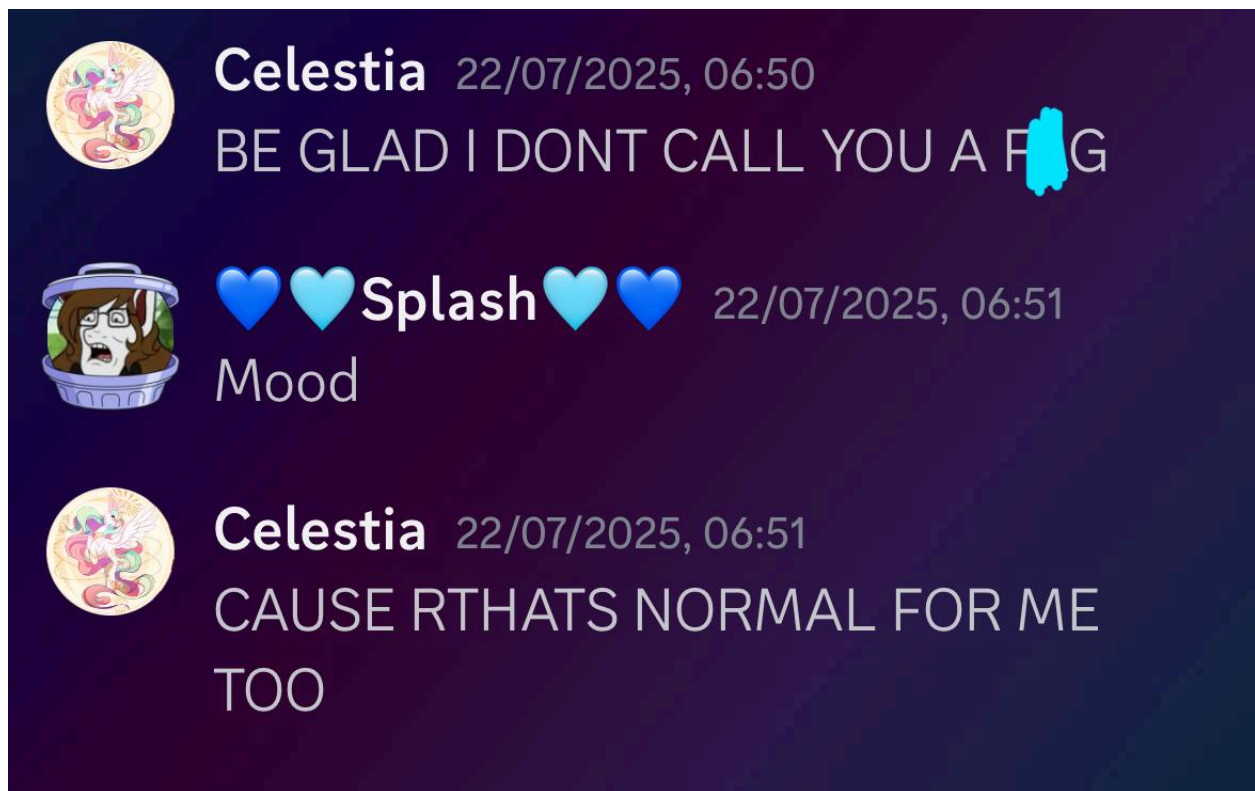

- being ignored in the chat

- Small arguments/disagreements
- Feeling left out
- Favoritism

Soon they progressed to more personal vents, where they felt they could open up more, originally I felt happy, glad I was in a safe place where we could communicate our emotions and frustrations ..

That soon changed as people began using slurs that weren't okay to use ; originally it started with Celestia

(I will refer to the words used as "F slur" even if I can say them, and blur out a single letter in screenshots, just out of respect for people who may be sensitive to these words.)

During that conversation I was extremely upset that splash just saw it as a joke and thought it was okay for Celestia to use this word in a 'joking sense' especially when it's a word she can NOT use.

Due to this I stepped back to write out a message to send to our server , during this time they were talking in the server , these are some things I just wanted to point out that was said.

I stepped back and went offline to think bout things for a while, I understand that left you guys on edge and may of set a little panic in you but for my own mental health I had to take a step back from that conversation and being online in general.

I'm going to try to be 100% honest with how what was said upset me because I want to be transparent and you deserve that transparency too. And it will be written with names instead of "you" just to keep it clear.

am not attacking you, I am just explaining how it affected me due to being one of “those people” you were taking about.

I’ll start of with what originally started off me being upset, the use of the slur “fug”, I don’t care about the word if another queer uses it , but someone being straight and using it (even as a joke) is so hurtful. The word is full of hate and oppression; a white person shouldn’t go around saying the N word due to how harmful it is. And it wouldn’t be okay or excused even if they said that it was a joke.

It’s the same with fug. The LGBTQ+ community were beuaten, silenced, brutalualized and kulled daily. Still are. So when it’s said by someone who will under the assumption that she could In fact say it , even if she meant no harm at all, it still does it , in her case subconsciously, but it still does cause hurt. It's something that Tia shouldn't be saying because it is wrong for her to say it.

Knowing this context now and looking back at "BE GALT I DONT CALL YOU A FG" "CAUSE RTHATS NORMAL FOR ME TOO" made me so uncomfortable knowing it's a word thrown about often. Second point I'm going to make of what upset me is when Mia said "Cause I personally believe if No one is hurt you, others and animals do what ever you want just dont make it a problem" it was upsetting due to the fact that so many things hurt people

A IS SPLASH

not to be “your problem” but to make people aware that what they see as insignificant is in fact such a large thing.

“Be trans own it but dont get huffy if someone isnt fond of it. there's gonna be people out there who unfortunately will never be ok with it. and thats fine!” This rubbed me wrong , it isn't really okay that there's people out there who will never respect us, my community, because not being accepted, even if it's in silence leads to conversations like this happening, I just so happened to be out already, but if I wasn't ? This whole conversation today would've made me hate myself and hide away, be disgusted with who I am , and often times that leads to suicide in young

Thinking like this isn't a great way to perceive things, you may think it's not doing harm but it is , reading " I can't me feel gross about myself , it made that really fucking hurt.

It's one thing to assume as they're a "manly man" as Tia said , but once you're told they go by she/her , you should try to respect that and use those pronouns. Avoiding saying it because they feel wrong is harmful, it's insulting too.. it doesn't hurt anyone to make someone comfortable in their own skin, but actively not saying their pronouns does.

Tia- "They're just people so why do I need to care so much" we aren't asking you to bow to us, to normal person its criminal”

We arent, we really aren't treated as normal, if we were I wouldn't be afraid to come out , to tell new people I meet my pronouns, I wouldn't fear wearing flags or badges on my clothes , having my pronouns in my bios, the fact that this conversation is happening proves that we are NOT treated like normal people. We are still shunned and hated on. My brother got attacked by a group for being gay. Tell me that he was treated as if he was normal that day, I got chased by a group of 15 for being myself , for being pansexual and genderfluid, bullied for it constantly. That doesn't feel like I'm being treated and accepted normally.

You're mentioning a small group of people that are egotistical fucks who truth.

These were the main things , overall , what happened was really hurtful, I watched my friends say things that actively affect me and my community, I was panicking and crying realizing I could've just lost two people that I consider friends just because of how i identify.

I don't care that you like America and you're proud, I'm happy you are proud of where you came from.

I also don't care that you guys don't want to treat us as special, and give us extra attention, I don't need it.

All I care about is that what was said was harmful and just proved that my identify. How they claim we shove it down peoples throats and want extra attention. We're damaging kids, gross, we're going to hell, of course non of you said those extreme things , but they are said. They're posted. They're spoken to me. I'm insulted for one aspect of my being. Hated for it, harassed for it. And that's what proves that it isn't normalized, if you believe that our community isn't struggling and we are wanting attention , I suggest that you go look at lists of names and ages of young queer kids who have been murdered or killed themselves due to how we are treated. You wouldn't walk down the street and get shot/killed/ beaten for having a preferred color, or ice cream flavor , or preference over shoes. these are to the people who hurt us , and that's why we still beg to be treated equal.

I hope you can see now why what was said was degrading and harmful. And I hope I explained myself and my feelings well.

I am happy to be friends if you can see why it was wrong to say those things and if you can try to change how you view these situations, if not I'm happy to go through with our trades respectfully and go separate ways, which will pain me a lot, but I can't stay somewhere I am seen as "wrong" and not understood.

Again I'm not attacking you, please

I know you're not "wrong" you as a being is not wrong, and I do understand where you're coming from. I'm sorry that I upset you so deeply. Please that understand that just because I have different feelings about things doesn't mean I see you or other people in a bad shade of light, I have these feelings and thoughts and it's frustrating when I can't talk about it with people or I get told I've never experienced/had anything happen to me. It's like I'm being told how to feel or think and it's a massive itch on my shoulder, because at the end of the day you, in a general sense, don't know what I've been through. I don't like diving into it, it's hard.

Please understand when I say that it was pretty hurtful to me that you just assumed I was some form of LGBTQ. I've been very clear that I'm not, I'm just here. It hurts me when you just assume something about me, my whole life has been assumptions, about who I like, be it women or men who I'll be or, it'll be some insult. And it upsets me, it upsets me when (this is not you flutters, you've never done this but I need an example) you just assume I'm okay with you calling me by a label or whatever. ~~For~~ for the longest time called me a "cis" person. To a very large amount of people that term is like "fag" to you. I understand one can argue that it's an act word and has meaning to describe a non trans person, but it's a massive insult and honestly so offensive. I'm just a

I'm not saying that I know how oppressive the word "f#g" is, but I'm giving you insight as to why I understand how hurtful it can be if it's not used in a joking manner. I don't care if you call me cis jokingly but for everything holy do not call me a cis woman. It makes me sick and physically cringe, I won't say "f#g" anymore.

understand that you can't just change your mind about something so fast, I'll do my best. Genuinely, but it's difficult for someone who isn't used to this "new world(?) stuff.

Just to respond to some things , I wasn't saying that you see us in a bad light, I'm just saying that when you say the things you do it's actively harmful , and I don't want to sound rude but it's okay for a queer person to tell you that you don't understand, because you don't understand what it's like to be and to experience a queer life , you may understand other things, or had similar situations, but it isn't the same as queer , and that's okay, everyone has different experiences, and sometimes people just won't understand and it's okay to tell them "you don't understand."

And you may of been hurt when I assumed and I'm sorry. but when you because that's the two groups that say it. And I have never once seen you say you were straight until today.

“Cis” came around because people were mad at trans woman calling themselves woman, so they made it to seperate the two, but it's still okay to not want to be called cis. Just as a trans woman would just want to be called a woman, so I'm sorry you went through that. As well as being called “birth giver” and “chest feeder” you're simply a woman , a strong woman, so I'm sorry.

Also, even using “f💧g” jokingly if you're straight is still not okay, just so you're aware. And I never call anyone cis, I simply just say woman. or man.

affect us , and why we do what we do. I get that it's hard , but I am here , I tend to be open to people who want to learn and I'll happily talk about how things affect me or why things are the way they are , I just don't like ignorant people ~~who don't bother to~~ who don't bother to change their views on things. It's like I'm a child again being told I don't know anything and I just want attention, I'm greedy, confused. I'm happy that you're trying, and I'll help you if you want it and if you let me, because I don't want to lose you or Mia, you're the only proper friends I've had in a long time. I hope that makes sense

To add onto the first point too, I don't understand what it's like to be a mother , so if I tried speaking on it

Hii its um my turn to explain things in my way. I definitely gave off the wrong impression I should of been more clear when I was talking about the LGBTQ+ Community, the things I said I mean to refer to those who are toxic LGBTQ+ people kinda like how there are people on tik tok who act you know very cringe and and very closed minded on people having different opinions. I truly didnt mean others of the community like you or my friends. I love you flutters and I adore my trans and LGBTQ+ Friends to death. I shouldn't of lumped you guys in one i should of clarified that I was talking about the toxic part of the community. Being Bi myself I know kts scary to come out and show who you truly are. I've had community is like that. And my trans friends and other friends just wanna be seen as them and live their life. not have to constantly argue with other LGBTQ+ People that they just wanna live their lives quietly.

And when I said "If you dont agree thats fine!" in definitely not glorifying those who go out of their way to tell the community that. Im talking about people who dont understand it or agree with it but just go on with their lives and not go out of their way to discriminate those in the community. for exsample "my son os Trans i dont get it or like it but who cares Im just gonna be my own thing" I hope that makes sense on the point im trying to make

I didnt mean to offend you girl. I truly

-` , @ Grubble... PONY 22/07/2025, 15:21

It was definitely confusing because you had told me abt multiple times you were there for your friends when they were struggling through their identities, so it was a little winding , and I wish you had clarified , the toxic part of the community gives us such a bad name as I had mentioned , and I to talk sooner and not be so hurt.

All I wanted was to explain some things , that conversation just basically brought me back to conversations I had heard before that truly fucked me up. All I want to do is be me , go to pride, be able to show who I am and still be treated normal, I don't want how I identify to be such a large thing that gets in the way , yknow? But it always is. I'm proud to be queer. And I'll proudly tell people , but so much goes on that I can't do that shit so I got sent to flight or fight mode and I'm sorry if me backing away scared you, I still want to be friends, I was only going to step away completely if I was told that me emotions didn't matter and harmful stuff was still gonna be said

I had agreed to move on and correct their behaviors so they could learn and improve, saying they wanted to, later that day Celestia got into another argument about not using the right pronouns again, admittedly I defended her after learning about what she had said and asked the others to be patient and just remind her , but now I can say I truly don't believe that Celestia wanted to understand , and a large part of my accepting their apologies was because I didn't want to loose more friendships yet again, and as these were two older figures that I looked upto. I feel that now I shouldn've stood my ground a little more, but I have always struggled with that.

Celestia had stopped saying the F slur in the server , and I believed that we had truly progressed.

Small things would be said that I never really thought about or that rubbed me the wrong way but never felt Harmful.

I could see where they were coming from originally, but honestly reading their responses back now I feel as if I wasn't truly listened to. But is still feels wrong that splash spoke about how much they adored their Q LGBTQIA+ friends only to be okay with a straight person using that slur ..

I had truly hoped that everything said was true and I do hope that they still work towards being more open minded and less harmful.

Although the previous information was more so about Celestia it is important for this next part of events.

Celestia was kicked from a server due to people feeling uncomfortable and the fact that their husband had said the N word.

Important context: T is black

Celestia 10/08/2025, 23:34

Husband said the n word???

Huh??????

-`,@ Grubbbbl...  10/08/2025, 23:34

What

Celestia 10/08/2025, 23:34

This had to be T

-`,@ Grubbbbl...  10/08/2025, 23:34

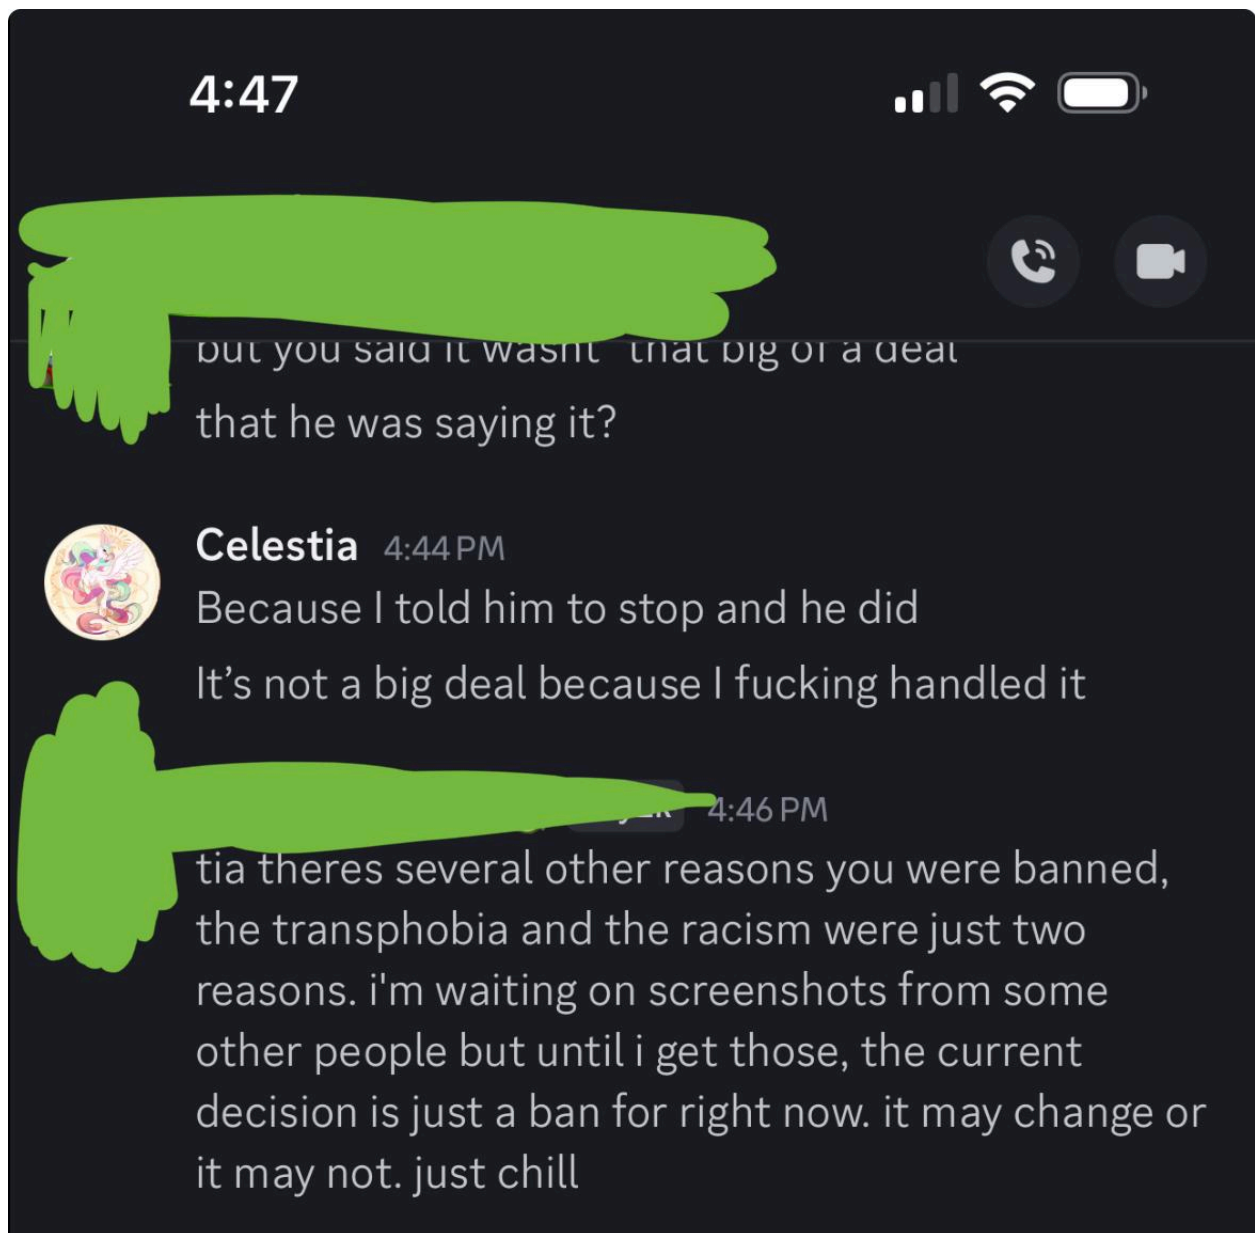

When did Mason say the n word?

Celestia 10/08/2025, 23:34

Like literal months ago and I told him to stop and he did

Never said it again when I said no

^ This grey screenshot is of the mod who told Celestia she was banned.

We spoke about it and things got intense as they blamed a person in our server , who we will call 'T' , saying it was them who probably complained.

Celestia and T had stopped doing a trade, and this had upset celestia because one of the items was an item of pinki pie that she had really wanted, this and T had pulled out of a trade with splash, previously they also had an argument about pronouns and Celestia mentioned her child was sick and it had been worrying her so she had missed chats about pronouns, for T to say this :

24/07/2025, 16:58

i work with children and i absolutely know that a fever in rash is absolutely common at baby's age. i know that if it stressed tia out a lot she would have moved away from this . but ok i have to go into work now so

Which caused Celestia to very much hate T, which is why they automatically blamed them.

Mentioning their husband saying the N word is important because splash then said

After that everyone continued talking like it was normal, I went away to write up a message , splash refusing to tell me what she said only made me know that she was in the wrong , that what she said was shameful; the fact that she only didn't share what was said in the server also because she didn't want to make me "uncomfortable" is so gut wrenching , that shouldn't be why you say something? You should KNOW that it was harmful, pure hate, RACISM. It ain't humor, it isn't funny , it isn't a joke , it's pure fucking racism, it was disgusting.

My profile pictures change in some screenshots due to her deleting some stuff but luckily I took screenshots before she did.

comments on his car , to the point that he felt unsafe for himself and his sons

Hearing that racist shit let me know I definitely done the right thing leaving , knowing they have black family members and still continued to talk about a member of the black community that was is mind fucking.

My fiance is mixed, would she call him slurs or say hateful comments to him if she got 'angry' ?

This was my experience and what had happened with MsColorSplash, I hope that this made sense and that the evidence was clear. Splash continued on to delete the message of the racist comment she made, but I got it before she did.

In the end I believe I should've had the spine to call off the friendship originally, but I am a naive people pleaser , and this ends up with me staying in situations I should've left , and I should've grown a spine earlier and continued to stand my ground, I have always been one to state my opinions when I disagreed with people, my mother always says i care too much and I shouldn't call out with people over opinions , but I can't help it, I don't want the company I keep to be oppressive or have harmful views , because not only do I feel unsafe, it feels as if I'm teaching them that their views are okay (which it's not) or that I too feel the same way, or can excuse those behaviors, and I DONT.

It took me longer in this situation to step back because in all honesty, I've been lonely, I have a few friends, but they're very limited and losing these two scared me, as I was so open with them about my past, traumas, and my emotions that it felt like I'd lose a part of me seeing them go: I spoke to them everyday, every second I could, and the change terrified me. Not only because of the emotional reasons but because of the fact I also hate changes to my routines.

After leaving these two I haven't been as upset at the other group, I feel like having two older figures confirm my fears and how I was feeling really just set in stone that "omg they hate me" and after I had stepped back I messaged on the other group a little more, and didn't feel the hate and frustration that I once felt.

I will be blocking Splash and Tia on every platform I know them on once I've sent out my package to them, it may be cowardly to not let them see this, but I don't want arguments, I don't want fights, I just want to spread the truth.. but if by some chance someone shows you two this?

Splash, your jokes aren't just jokes, your views are genuinely harmful and how you can just walk around making that humor and just chalking it up to people having that taste or not it's just you saying "I'll only be racist around other racists", it isn't funny, it isn't something to giggle at, or something to say when you're "angry" just to put a black person down and make you feel better about yourself, it's RACIST. You can't claim to not be racist then actively be a part of the problem by making an oppressive 'joke' and seeing nothing wrong with it. I'm disappointed in you, so fucking hurt that you turned out like this because I looked up to you, I wanted to be like you, just for you to be a like this.. I hope you re-evaluate your actions and maybe just MAYBE you'll be able to see how your actions actively hurt people around you and you'll actually do something abt it rather than pretend you're an ally just to say offensive shit in secret.

Tia, originally I forgave you when you apologized but looking back? That didn't even feel like an apology but rather you excusing your insolence behind a thin veil of 'I'm learning' or you 'didn't understand'

I'm sorry your past happened to you, but you've been around that group longer than I have, you had enough time to learn a few things. You explaining A's partner is too "manly man" for you to respect her pronouns let me know it from the start, you're TYPING !! You have the time to slow down and check profiles.. it's not like you're talking and it slips out; you chose to be ignorant. I wish that you will look into yourself and find out why you find it so hard to let others be themselves, they don't need your approval or permission to be who they are. Bitching in a private server about the LGBTQIA+ doesn't make you an Ally. Not only that, being okay with your friend making that racist and degrading comment let me know that you truly have no respect for people who aren't just like you, not speaking up when splash mentioned they said something RACIST and just moving on and brushing over it means you're allowing this oppression to happen too. I also looked up to you, I loved you guys and you turned out to be so fucking shitty.

I hope you learn how to act, and quick, and I hope that you do for the sake of you and your child, because you never know who they'll grow up to be, and they deserve to be a kind soul who accepts and loves others with no limitations, just like you and splash should be. I truly hope she grows up happy and well, and achieves great things in life.

As for myself I'm going to learn how to stand up for what I believe in even more, even if it means losing close friends, because if they can't stand for what I stand for? That just means they wouldn't mind seeing me and my community fall, and they were never a friend to begin with. No company that sour is worth keeping, no matter how sweet the memories.
