

Photos from Gould's Wash - Three Falls in Hurricane - December 4

Well, the ORIGINAL PLAN was to hike the Yellow Man and Windmill trails on Gooseberry Mesa. However, providence decided otherwise... As we were climbing UT-59 in our cars onto Gooseberry Mesa from Hurricane, there was a terrible accident just in front of us which left multiple people trapped in their cars. Those qualified to help rushed over to the vehicles to provide assistance. Fortunately, the accident didn't involve any of our hikers (some of us just missed by a minute or so), but traffic on UT-59 was stopped in both directions for hours... Ultimately, a portion of us turned around and headed back to Hurricane, and it was decided that we would hike the Gould's Wash - Three Falls hike in Hurricane instead. So, this trip report is of Gould's Wash and Three Falls.

The day was very nice for hiking, and the hike, though presenting us with a challenging climb up to the second fall, wasn't too bad after that. Spectacular views of the canyon, the three falls and of the Pine Valley Mountains down canyon. Enjoy the photos!

Group Photo

Gould's Wash - Three Falls Trail 12-04-21