Abstract

Abstracts provide a concise overview of the problem, the method used, and the research's findings and implications. They must be written in English and be 150–200 words long. State the purpose to provide the reader with a background to the study, and, hence to smoothly lead to a description of the methods employed in the investigation. The methodology contains enough information to enable the reader to understand techniques used to conduct the research. Results and implications provide readers with as much information as possible regarding the research's findings, practical benefits and the value that the research brings to a particular field. At the end of the abstract, write how research boundaries can be improved in the future, as well as the research's uniqueness or novelty.

Key words: conference, presentation, template, university.
