A. Introduction (Font Cambria, size 12 pt., space 1,15)

The introduction must be clearly written and outline the main issue addressed in the manuscript. Before presenting the research objectives, the authors should provide sufficient background information and a brief literature review. This is necessary to outline existing solutions, identify the most relevant previous studies, highlight their limitations, and clarify what the current research aims to overcome. Additionally, the introduction should demonstrate the scientific value and originality of the work.¹

At the end of the introduction, the authors should emphasize the importance and novelty of the study in relation to the identified problem and research objectives. If applicable, a concise description of the research methodology may also be included before discussing the study's originality.² (Font Cambria, size 12 pt., space 1,15)

B. Discussion (Font Cambria, size 12 pt., space 1,15)

1. Main Discussion Title 1 (Font Cambria, size 12 pt., space 1,15)

The results and discussion should be presented together in a single section. This section should begin with the primary findings, followed by supporting results, all accompanied by relevant discussion. Any figures and tables used (if applicable) must also be included within this same section.³

The structure of the manuscript should clearly distinguish between main sections, sub-sections, and sub-sub-sections, using a numbering format as illustrated in the example below.

1.1. Sub-Discussion 1 (Font Cambria, bold & italic, size 12 pt., space 1,15)

The following is the example of the sub-sub-section (if any). (Font Cambria, size 12 pt., space 1,15)

1.1.1 Sub-Sub-Discussion 1 (Font Cambria, italic, size 12 pt., space 1,15)

Tables and figures must be centered and properly referenced within the manuscript. Figures should be clear and have a minimum resolution of 300 DPI (dots per inch) to ensure high-quality printing. Tables should follow an open format style, without vertical lines, as illustrated below: (Font Cambria, size 12 pt., space 1,15)

¹ Better if the Author(s) may provide several cases at the beginning as an introduction to the main problem that going to be discussed. The footnote can also be used for explaining some details of the discussion if needed.

C. Conclusion (Font Cambria, size 12 pt., space 1,15)

The conclusion should be presented in a single paragraph without using numerical lists or bullet points. If recommendations are included, they should be stated in the final sentences. The conclusion should address the research objectives directly, offering a clear and concise summary. Avoid restating the Abstract or merely summarizing the research results. Instead, provide a thoughtful explanation of the potential applications or suggestions related to the findings. (Font Cambria, size 12 pt., space 1,15)

Reference (Font Cambria, size 12 pt., space 1,15)
