Issue #1 Alien of Duly Magazine is landing in FIVE days.

"That night, as your mother treats your bruises, you realize that your virtues of nonviolence and compassion can make you as vulnerable as your ethnic roots you're so proud of." Read and written by Jiji Wong @jiji.w.wong

[Video description: A textured blue background with a large pink circle that appears in the middle saying "5 DAYS" in a bluesy-purple. The main text is in bold capital red letters. Duly Magazine sits at the bottom in a bright red font the entire way through. There's moving images of a shooting star, a blinking alien and flying spaceship decorate the page.

The scene changes, only the blue background remains the same and a speech bubble appears on the page. A quote in dark blue appears as if it's being typed live. There are faint line drawings of a spaceship, planets, an astronaut and stars that decorate the shot. The last shot is of a video of a flying saucer coming into view. It's surrounded by instructions to preorder and where to preorder in bright red capital letters. A line drawing of a rocket sits to the side. The text is written on what looks like scraps of paper pinned to the page. The bottom is decorated with a brown file that says "confidential".]
