

My Bio.

I am a man of pride and I hard work. I learned a lot in life as it ran by me as grew up to be the person I am today. I like people and I'm especially intrigued by love people that work towards finding their purpose in life and support others following their. I love to live life, each day is a blessing. My family has always been my reason for the changes I've made in my life. Continuing to pursue and education and viewing myself as a lifelong learner is one of my motivations that has opened many other doors. Motivation is a healthy tool when used positively.

I am a basketball fan and player. I love working on my game to get better and stronger. I also love running it is something that relaxes me, and also helps me stay in shape. I love music, but soul music, hip hop, R&B, reggae, are my favorite.

The streets has shaped me. My family has shaped me to become this person I am today. I was allowed to live freely with no worries for a while. That freedom was also part of my downfall years later, but during this time I learned a lot about people. I learned a lot about myself, what kind personality I have, how I think, and what types of situations really affects me.

I learn a lot of things the hard way, but I learn from my mistakes and from others'. As I grew older I started to see what life really had to offer, and that's where my change started. I would rather live my life making my family proud of me rather than having regrets for me. I rather be a father my children can be proud of one day, than dead or in jail, because of my selfishness.

The biggest current event that has been on my mind is the killing of black males by typically white police officers and the overall way blacks are treated in America society because of the color of our skin. This is nothing new to those who have been prosecuted because of the color of our skin, but the rest of the world is starting to see it. This really has me thinking of the odds a black person must overcome and how hard we have to work to make it in this world. Chris Rock says it well, "A black man gotta fly to get somethin', a white man can walk to."
