Abstract

[Write a self-contained abstract of 200-250 words. Briefly state the context or problem, purpose, method, principal results, and conclusion or implications. Do not include citations unless indispensable.]

Keywords: [keyword 1; keyword 2; keyword 3; keyword 4; keyword 5]

Introduction

[Establish the educational context and significance of the problem. Synthesize recent and relevant scholarship, identify the research gap, present the study purpose, and end with the research questions, objectives, or hypotheses. Avoid a purely chronological review of sources.]

Method

Research Design

[Identify and justify the research design or approach.]

Participants and Context

[Describe the setting, participants or data sources, inclusion criteria, sampling, and relevant contextual information while protecting confidentiality.]

Instruments or Data Sources

[Describe instruments, protocols, measures, documents, or other sources. Report development, validation, reliability, or trustworthiness evidence as applicable.]

Data-Gathering Procedures

[Explain the sequence of data collection or implementation in enough detail to support evaluation and replication.]

Data Analysis

[Identify the quantitative, qualitative, mixed-methods, or synthesis procedures used. Name software only when relevant.]

Ethical Considerations

[State the approving or reviewing body and reference number when available. Explain consent or assent, confidentiality, risk management, data security, permissions, and safeguards for vulnerable participants.]

Results

[Present findings in a logical order aligned with the research questions. Report sufficient evidence without repeating every value in both the text and tables. Use effect sizes, confidence intervals, participant quotations, themes, or other appropriate evidence.]

Example Table

Table 1

Descriptive Title of the Table

Variable or Category	Group 1	Group 2	Total
[Row 1]	[value]	[value]	[value]
[Row 2]	[value]	[value]	[value]
[Row 3]	[value]	[value]	[value]

Note. [Explain abbreviations, statistical notation, sources, or other information needed to interpret the table.]

Descriptive Title of the Figure

Discussion

[Interpret the findings in relation to the research questions, theoretical or conceptual framing, and relevant scholarship. Explain agreements, contradictions, plausible mechanisms, implications, limitations, and the contribution of the study. Do not merely repeat the Results section.]

Conclusion and Recommendations

[Provide a concise evidence-based conclusion. State practical, theoretical, policy, or research implications. Recommendations must arise directly from the findings and should not introduce new results.]

Declarations

AUTHOR INSTRUCTION: Retain every declaration heading. If an item does not apply, write “Not applicable.” Do not omit the heading.

Ethics Approval

[Name the approving or reviewing body, approval or control number, and date. If exempt, state the basis and responsible authority.]

Informed Consent

[State how informed consent and, when applicable, assent or parental permission were obtained.]

Conflict of Interest

[Declare any financial, professional, personal, or institutional interests that could influence the work.]

Funding

[Identify the funder and grant number, or state that the study received no specific funding.]

Data Availability

[Explain where and under what conditions the data, instruments, materials, or analytic code may be accessed.]

Artificial Intelligence Use

[Disclose any generative or automated tools used in writing, editing, translation, analysis, visualization, or other stages. Authors remain accountable for all content.]

Author Contributions

[Use the CRediT taxonomy when appropriate, such as conceptualization, methodology, investigation, formal analysis, writing, supervision, and project administration.]

Acknowledgments

[Recognize non-author contributions without revealing author identity in the blinded version. Use a neutral placeholder when necessary.]
