How much patience do you have, and what difference does it make anyway? Let's think about that. What if the first time your friend made you angry, you threw your arms up and said "Forget it!" and that was the end of the friendship? What if the first time you stood at bat and struck out, you stomped off the field and that was the end of your playing baseball? What if the first time you hit the wrong note on your piano, you said "I give up" and you never played the piano again and that was the end of your musical ambitions? Obviously, giving up and being impatient would keep you from ever being successful.

The Italians say it this way:

He who has no patience has nothing at all.

Remember this: Whether you're building a friendship, better grades, or a talent, patience is an important ingredient to success. Today, be patient with yourself and others. Don't give up.
