

Elvis Walking Through a Series of Doors
by David Kramer

INT. The beginning of a long hallway. Elvis is walking, in full classic costume, with another person (back to the audience/camera) in front of him.

They go through a doorway, and the man, NELSON, holds the door for ELVIS.

ELVIS

Thank you. Thank you very much.

NELSON

No problem sir.

They continue walking for a bit. ELVIS is strutting. They approach another door. NELSON opens it. ELVIS attempts to take the door and hold it for NELSON, but NELSON allows ELVIS to walk ahead instead. It is awkward. They chuckle.

ELVIS

Oh...oh thank you. Thank you very much.

NELSON

Sure thing.

They keep walking. They reach another door. This time, ELVIS opens the door for NELSON. NELSON walks through, and almost brushes against ELVIS's shoes.

ELVIS

Hey man, don't step on my--just be careful, ya know.

NELSON

Oh sorry man, sure thing. Won't happen again.

ELVIS

Thank you. Thank you very--

Blackout.
