

Searching for the Cat Lady Killer

We have reason to believe we have identified who the Cat Killer is. Currently, we suspect that Krystal Scott of Kokomo, Indiana is the culprit. Evidence obtained shows that she has been actively engaging in skinning cats and other animals alive since November of 2019 and has recently begun publicly live streaming it while wearing either a coyote mask or cat skull mask.

Organizations now involved: PETA and the Animal Beta Project

What did the suspect look like prior to us beginning the investigation? Here are the photos of the suspect we had to work with at the beginning.

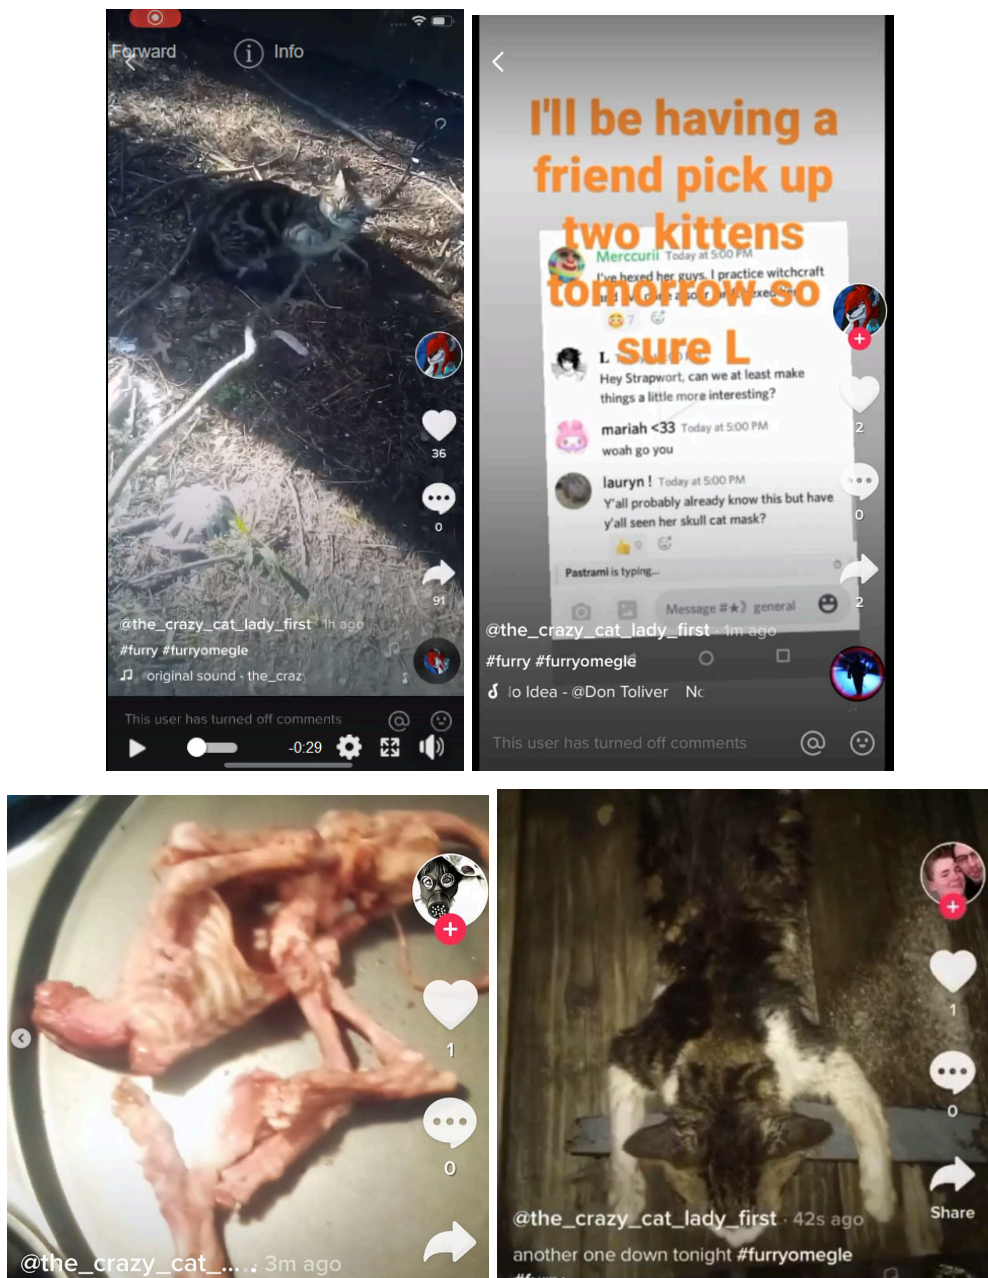

We also knew what their kitchen looked like:

What evidence did we have to suggest that they were killing and mutilating cats?

When could we expect them to live stream? They posted their “expected” schedule.

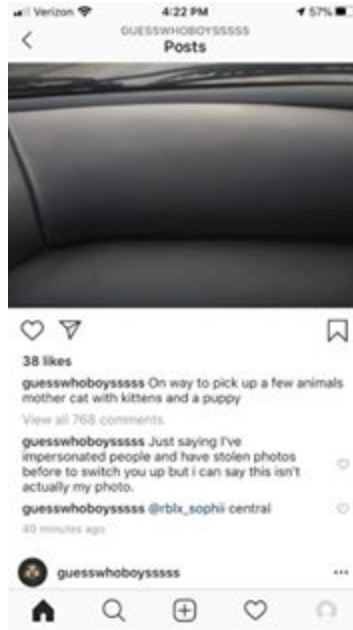

Initially, the killer claimed to be located in Houston, Texas during a live stream.

Their Tik Tok account, @the_crazy_cat_lady_first, confirmed that they had an instagram account. They posted an image of it and blocked out the username. They captioned the post, “Happy Hunting”.

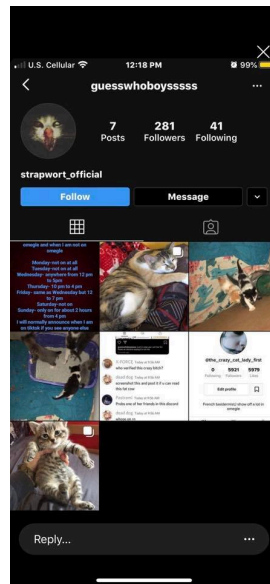

In a post on their Instagram account, which has since been removed, they confirmed that their time zone was in Central America, so their viewers knew when they could expect to see her on Omegle.

Central Time Zones include the following: Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Missouri, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, and North Dakota.

Here are some of the first pictures posted on this account:

Then, the following image was posted by this account with a caption that said they were on their way to pick up more kittens on May 2, 2020. A reverse image search found that this image was not stolen but was original.

The first thing we looked at was the weather and tree lines. In Houston, Texas, the weather was 85 degrees and sunny. This image appeared rainy and gloomy – Texas was hence confirmed as not the suspected state they are located in. Additionally, the trees lack leaves. Most trees in southern states have leaves completely at this time. This led us to believe that this was taken in a Northern state. The thought process of this was documented in a live stream with Nala the Cat on Tik Tok for proof. Below are pictures of Houston, TX weather on May 2, 2020 when the post was made. From this we concluded they do not match.

Members of the Cancel the Cat Lady group then further confirmed that the image was taken on an interstate in Indiana.

The account also posted pictures of two guns.

The initial guesswhoboysssss account was then removed from Instagram. A new account emerged under the username @spratwort. The following images were posted. TRIGGER WARNING:

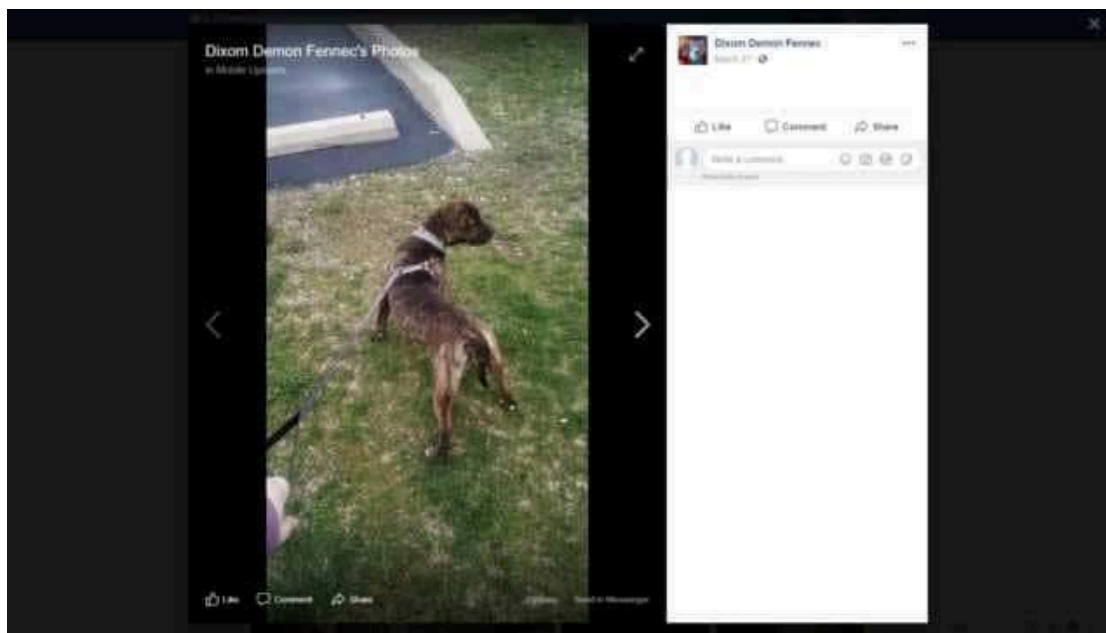

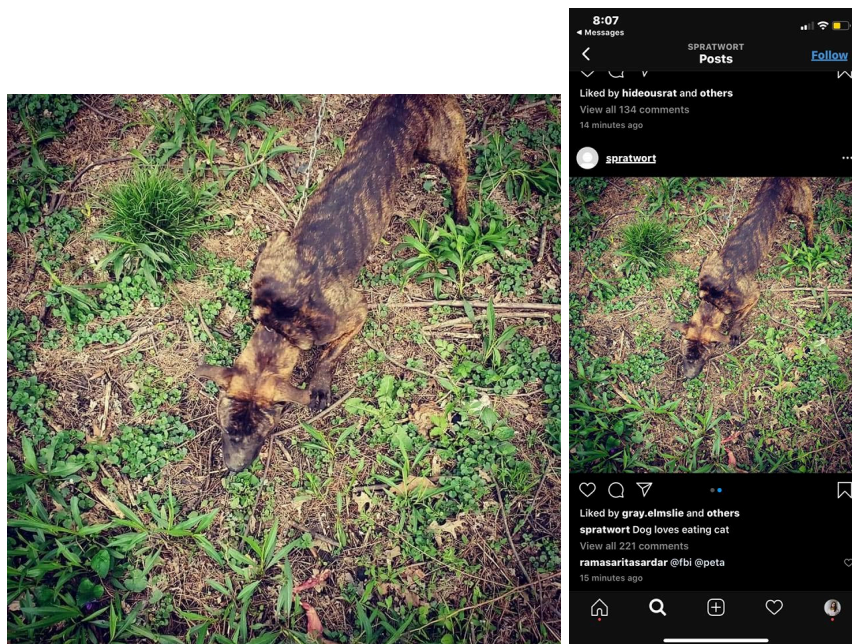

Take note that the gun is the same as the one posted on their account that was deleted.

On their Instagram account, the killer continued to post more images of animals and provided us with more identifying features. In one post, they featured their dog that has a brindle coat eating

We confirmed that Dixom Demon Fennec was the alias of Krystal Scott.

We were also informed by the Cat Killer on Instagram that they were involved in a group on Facebook that supported them skinning the cats. We learned that in this group, she would tell them that she “found” them already dead prior to skinning them. However, from the videos on Omegle we can confirm that they were NOT already dead.

We also found evidence to suggest that Krystal, AKA Dixon Demon Fennec, has been engaging in this conduct as early as November 2019.

There is additional evidence that suggests that her cat posted on her facebook account has been strangled by Krystal. The cat in the image on the right below is from a post on their Tik Tok account.

We also confirmed that they were actively purchasing kittens in Indiana. The images from the breeder provided to us were the same images that were posted on the gueswhoboysssss account.

The suspect's images of their home on their account also matched the videos posted to the_crazy_cat_lady_first account on Tik Tok.

On May 2, Dixon Demon Fennec live streamed a video of their house interior to try to prove they were not the suspect. We then compared videos of the house to the pictures of the cat killer in their streams on Omegle.
