

Gender-Based Violence Presentations

Objectives:

- We will be able to read expository texts from around the world, about gender-based violence.
- We will be able to synthesize the information into its most important points.
- We will be able to present a summary of the important points, visually (through a powerpoint) and orally (aloud to our group members).

Directions:

1. Read one of the following articles. Make sure each person in your group has chosen a different article.

- ☐ Nepal: Chaupadi Culture and Violence Against Women
- ☐ Everyday Violence Against Pregnant Women in India
- ☐ Family Planning Misconceptions in Nigeria
- ☐ On the UN, youth, and child brides

2. Pull out the most important (salient) information from the text. Consider the following questions:

- ★ What is the subject of the article?
- ★ Where does it take place?
- ★ What are some of the stakeholders (victims, oppressors, government, public opinion), and what are their viewpoints on the issue?
- ★ What are the issues of injustice? How do they pertain (relate) to Millenium Development Goals, and gender-based violence?
- ★ Is there a solution to the problem? What would it take for that to happen?
- ★ What literary devices does the author use to create her point (mood, setting, characterization, imagery, metaphor, etc)?
- ★ Who is the intended audience, and is the message being heard by those whom it most affects?

3. Make a powerpoint slide, based on your main points. See below for possible template:

- Template: Make a copy, share with your group members. Each person completes their own slide.
- Make sure you change privacy settings so that “Anyone with the link can comment.”
