Welcome to the Middlebury Institute Fall 2022-Summer 2023

Experiential Learning Impact Report

The Middlebury Institute of International Studies draws a diverse group of professionals from around the globe to debate and solve issues that have plagued our world for decades. At the Institute, students are driven and mission-focused on making a positive impact in the world. They combine their passions and interests with gaining “real world” experience through internships and research projects. These interests drive students to study and learn across the globe, from the United Nations in New York looking at disarmament policies to a remote village in Laos working on program evaluation.

This impact report serves as a compilation of all the internships and projects Middlebury Institute students have worked on and completed in the last year. The projects and internships students undertake have a direct impact on the communities they work in as well as their careers after graduation. Professional experiences offer students the opportunity to showcase their hard work and knowledge to potential employers. This report is the nexus of work done by students in their field using skills they built through their coursework at the Institute.

This report comprises three main sections: Semester-Long Programs, January and Summer Faculty-led International Courses, and Middlebury Institute Student Research and Projects. Each of these three sections provides an overview of various programs that faculty and staff have helped curate over the years to allow students to apply their knowledge in their fields of study. The report showcases the diverse interests of the Institute student body, which spans across degree programs, professional fields and geographic settings.

Sincerely,

Experiential Programs — Hands-On, Mission-Oriented Learning

Part of the Institute's mission is to help provide students with hands-on learning experiences as part of their studies. Unlike typical classroom-based graduate programs, students in our program apply practical skills in their field of study before graduation. They gain not just professional experience but also relevant networking opportunities that often lead to jobs after graduation.

Professional Service Semester (PSS)

The Professional Service Semester (PSS) is one of the cornerstones for the Institute's semester-long programs. PSS helps students secure graduate-level internships, jobs, or consultancies in international organizations in the U.S. and abroad. For many students, the IPSS experience acts as a stepping stone to a future career. The program's networking possibilities and international exposure are just a few of the benefits students receive through their participation. An IPSS assignment complements a student's degree focus by providing an applied learning environment for students to develop skills and knowledge not covered in traditional classes.

Practica & Internships by Department

International Education Management Practicum

The three-semester MA in International Education Management (MA) program provides a rigorous, hands-on introduction to designing and facilitating meaningful international education programs. Throughout their studies and during a professional practicum during the final semester, students demonstrate their achievement of the five IEM program learning goals: international education theory, program design and assessment, intercultural competency, program administration and sustainable education.

Center for Blue Economy Fellows

The Center for Blue Economy (CBE) Fellowship is supported by Middlebury Institute's Center for the Blue Economy. This fellowship is open to students who specialize in the Ocean and Coastal Resource Management specialization within the International Environmental Policy degree. This fellowship gives students an opportunity to gain professional experience and make valuable contacts in their field. Here are the 2023 CBE Summer Fellows and a brief (oversimplified) project description. More about each of these students and their projects (in their own words) can be found at the CBE Summer Fellows Blog site.

Experiential Programs Community-Oriented Programs:

Social Impact Corps

Middlebury Social Impact Corps (MSIC) is a partnership-based program focused on action, research, partnership development, and mentorship. MSIC Scholars match with a social enterprise or NGO for a four-week winter term or an eight-week summer internship. This year's cohorts focused on long-term partnership with Impact Monterey County (IMC), through identifying community needs in relation to IMC's mission. Scholars mentor a select cohort of Middlebury College students. Collaborate with Dr. Netta Avineri in the Middlebury Social Impact Corps (MSIC), a partnership-based program focused on action research, partnership development, and mentorship in emerging market countries.

Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL)/Teaching Foreign Languages (TFL) Practicum and Applied Linguistics Capstones

The TESOL/TFL Program builds students' capacity in three interrelated domains associated with language teaching: language/linguistics, pedagogy, and research. At the culmination of the program, students take two capstone courses. In the Practicum Capstone, they complete a semester-long internship that requires them to teach in an actual classroom in the greater Monterey Peninsula area and to hone their skills for entering into the job market. In the Applied Linguistics Capstone (ALC), they revise a data-based course project related to curriculum design, assessment, or research, which often involves collaborating with local, national, and even international stakeholders.

Middlebury Institute Student Research and Projects

Whether it is building a report for the United Nations Development Programme or crafting a scholarly thesis on the history of nonproliferation treaties, Middlebury Institute students contribute high-quality research across numerous international issues areas. Below are some examples of the work contributed to their various fields by Middlebury Institute students this past year.

Center on Terrorism, Extremism, and Counterterrorism (CTEC)

The Center on Terrorism, Extremism, and Counterterrorism (CTEC) students conduct in-depth research on terrorism and other forms of extremism. They work with a multitude of organizations and agencies to research issues which inform private, government, and multilateral institutional understanding of and responses to terrorism threats. They have three main areas of focus which guide their work: threat finance and sanctions, extremist messaging and terrorist use of the internet, and special operations and countering the threat of terrorism.
