Properties of Behavior

Principle

Internal and External

Behavior is based on perspective (knowledge, skills, and dispositions). Behavior can be in the form of thoughts, language, or actions. Thoughts only directly have internal effects. Language and actions have both internal and external effects (with thoughts coming along for the ride).

Context

The effects of behaviors depend on context. This includes the sequence of behaviors, presence of surrounding behaviors, and people's sensitivities. Responding to "all lives matter" in response to "black lives matter" is discrimination; it's true on its own but marginalizing because it ignores discrimination in this context. As an example of sequence, getting consent before an action gets different results than doing the action and then getting consent.

Value

People aren't good or bad, but behaviors are. (People are beautiful, who are either hiding it or showing it). The value of a behavior is determined by ethical thinking. All behaviors are understandable, but that doesn't make them right. Behaviors are conditionally acceptable.
