Because I know how much you care about the numbers, we'll also discuss how to monitor the web traffic you buy to determine if you're getting an ROI.

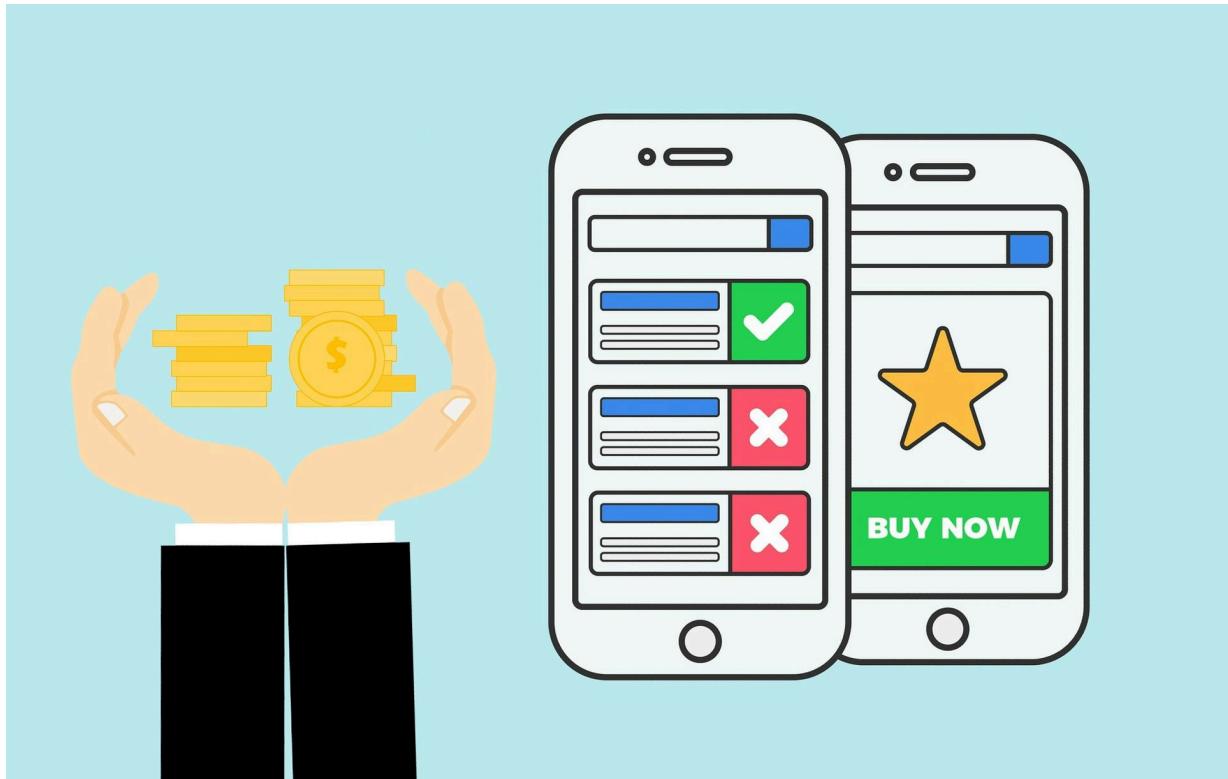

Let's get into it then!

6 Ways to Buy Web Traffic

Creating quality content, using relevant keywords, getting backlinks, etc. are all top methods of driving traffic to your website. These methods however can be time-consuming and take months before you see results.

So in addition to SEO, use the following paid traffic sources to increase the number of your website visitors.

1. Native Ads

Native advertising is a method of presenting paid ads in a way that follows the layout on the website they appear. By letting the ads blend in with the content on the platform where they're placed conversion rates are higher.

Examples of native ads are:

- In Feed Ads. An example of in-feed ads is the advertisements that appear on your social media pages.
- Content Recommendations. When you finish reading an article and find suggestions of other articles you should read at the bottom of the page this could be native ads.
- Search Results Ads. These appear at the top of your search engine results.
- Video Advertorials.

Because native ads don't look like ads readers may click on a link without realizing it is a paid advertisement. This has raised ethical concerns about the use of native advertising.

2. Google Ads

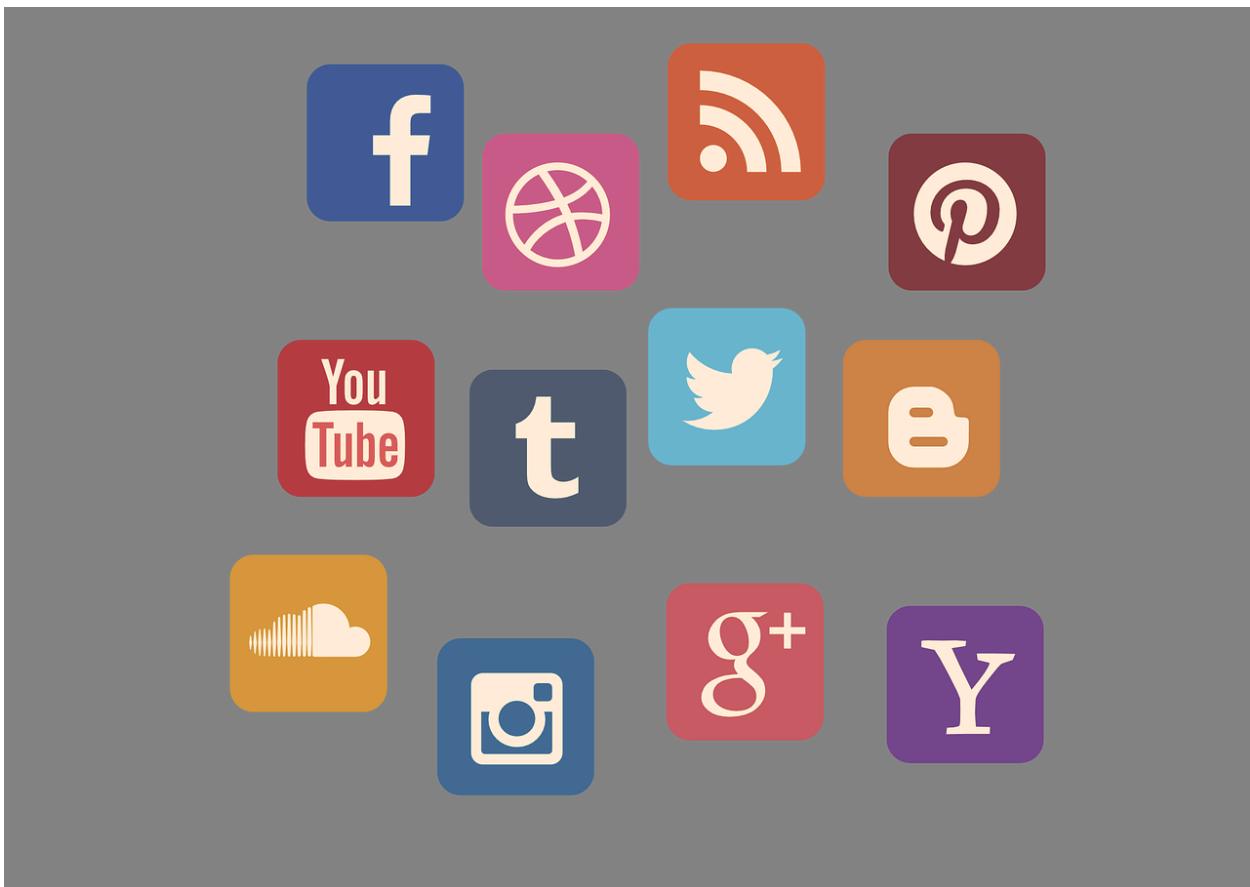

When you do a google search at the top of the search results page you'll often find ads related to the keywords you searched. You can tell they're advertisements because they are marked "AD"

For your ad website to feature at the top of a google search query you need to pay Google to place your ad in front of the millions of people who search for your product. Paying for Google ads can bring lots of traffic to your website if the internet surfers click on the ad.

Google Ads are charged per click. That means while your ad may appear in many search results you only pay for the traffic that clicks on your ad and lands on your website. This is commonly referred to as pay per click \(PPC\).

3. Social Media

Close to 4 billion people are using social media today. That makes the different social media platforms the perfect place to go looking for web traffic.

Social media platforms like Facebook, Instagram, and YouTube offer paid advertising options that you can use to reach your target audience. For your investment in paid web traffic from social media to pay off you need to take time to understand how to place your ads on the platforms so that they can get enough clicks.

4. Offline Events

Getting yourself out there the old-fashioned way to network can get you direct traffic to your website. So paying for tradeshows, networking events, or seminars in your website niches will be worth your while because you have the opportunity to meet and attract your ideal clients.

If you have the finances you can also organize your own event to generate high quality leads for your business.

5. Radio Promotions

Radio show promotions

Radio advertising is still alive and kicking! So creating compelling advertisements to reach the large audience that still listens to the radio can certainly bring in more web traffic.

Recording a short and strong audio promotion doesn't cost a lot of time or money. If you manage to find the right radio station for your niche to promote your brand this method could get you tons of traffic.

6. Managed Web Traffic Plans

The results you get from the various paid web traffic sources are not all the same. For example, you can pay for Google Ads and nobody clicks on your ad. You, therefore, don't get any new traffic and no return on your investment.

This is why buying web traffic plans is often the best solution to increase your web traffic. With web traffic plans you're guaranteed a certain number of well-targeted visitors for a fixed amount.

At Key Marketing Elements we offer several web traffic plans that will deliver web traffic to your website in just a few simple clicks.
