I hold the rights to the image that I created for you. Characters, of course, belong to their respective owners, but the images I create do belong to me. Therefore, I hold the right to upload any commission asked of me unless the privacy fee is paid. Paying the privacy fee, however, does not mean you own the rights to the image, and production outside of personal use is strictly prohibited. You are more than welcome to ask about buying the rights to the image, but please note that the price for your commission will become much more expensive.

Please do not ask other artists to edit my artwork without my permission. I understand that the artwork you paid for is rightfully yours, but I still own the rights of the image. Unless you have bought those rights from me, any misdemeanor involving my art will be taken care of with the appropriate legal action.
