

UNIT 2: LOST IN THE COUNTRYSIDE

Last Saturday morning, Anna and her family drove to the countryside to visit her grandparents' farm. The farm, surrounded by green hills and colorful wildflowers, was much more peaceful than their noisy city. Anna loved the fresh air and beautiful views.

After lunch, Anna and her little brother, Tom, decided to explore the woods near the farm. They followed a narrow path until they reached a small stream. "This place is more relaxing than anywhere I've been," Anna said. But soon, they realized they had walked too far and didn't know how to get back. Tom started to feel scared, and Anna felt nervous too.

Anna remembered the advice her grandmother gave her earlier: "If you ever get lost, stay where you are, and look for familiar landmarks." She told Tom to stay calm and look around. Anna spotted a big oak tree she remembered from their walk earlier. They followed the tree and soon found the path back to the farm.

When they arrived, their grandmother was waiting at the gate. "You were so brave!" she said. That evening, as they sat under the stars, Anna thought, "This was the most exciting and beautiful day I've ever had."

UNIT 2: LOST IN THE COUNTRYSIDE

Last Saturday morning, Anna and her family drove to the countryside to visit her grandparents' farm. The farm, surrounded by green hills and colorful wildflowers, was much more peaceful than their noisy city. Anna loved the fresh air and beautiful views.

After lunch, Anna and her little brother, Tom, decided to explore the woods near the farm. They followed a narrow path until they reached a small stream. "This place is more relaxing than anywhere I've been," Anna said. But soon, they realized they had walked too far and didn't know how to get back. Tom started to feel scared, and Anna felt nervous too.

Anna remembered the advice her grandmother gave her earlier: "If you ever get lost, stay where you are, and look for familiar landmarks." She told Tom to stay calm and look around. Anna spotted a big oak tree she remembered from their walk earlier. They followed the tree and soon found the path back to the farm.

When they arrived, their grandmother was waiting at the gate. "You were so brave!" she said. That evening, as they sat under the stars, Anna thought, "This was the most exciting and beautiful day I've ever had."