

The early days

Micheal Flanagan was a young wanna be lawyer in Belfast. His dreams of being a lawyer were thrown out the window when he started drinking guinness. Falling down on his luck he instead became a door to doors salesman for Henry Hoover. On a quiet Thursday afternoon he knocked on the wrong house, the house of Sir Bean Beans, a British army officer. He was promptly beat up for disturbing them while they watched the Liverpool derby. On his way home he found a bottle of MDMA on the side of a wall. He took these and headed to his local pub, where he met Michelle, his future wife. He would sell her friends the bottle of MDMA, making more than a week's wage of a single bottle.

The next day after recovering from his hangover, he would go back to the spot he found the bottle. In a box next to the wall he would find many more bottles of MDMA. Thinking quickly he would take these bottles and walk home. Calling up Mr. Henry Hoover and resigning shortly after getting home.

The formation of the gang

Micheal would start selling pills individually in pubs and clubs, mostly to his now girlfriend Michelle and her friends. He would recruit his good friend James O'Neil to help him sell more pills. Eventually the two were making enough a week to afford drinks and have £20 each after a night out. Soon hiring a couple more close friends into what they called 5th Avenue Micks, despite being on 7th avenue.

Soon they were making good money off these bottles. To support long term activities of the gang, they began taking money to keep a couple local pubs safe. Stepping on a few local gangs' toes in the process.

Time to run

However, luck would soon change. After they went to take a second box of MDMA bottles they were caught, fortunately they managed to run away in time due to the "fat bastard dealer running out of air", in Micheals own words. Soon the rival gangs would chase him out of Belfast and out of Ireland.

He would move out to the United States on the Irish rover. They worked for a long time down in New York City and Chicago, growing in strength over many years.

The sun

After working in New York, Micheal and his boys decided their pale skins could use the sun. They packed up, went to Ohio, saw scarface and then headed to Miami to begin the next chapter.

Present day

Jake Grant