Parents in Science Slack
Hosted by the GSA Childcare Conference Committee

Purpose

To provide a space for parent scientists to socialize and share resources.

Being a parent in science has its own unique set of challenges, and we can begin to address those challenges by cultivating community and providing social support for one another.

Talk about your science. Talk about your kids. Talk about the interaction and the intersection of the two. Ask your peers how they've dealt with prioritizing family and career. Get tips on attending a conference with kids in tow. Vent when you need to; offer a listening ear when others need you.

Code of Conduct

- Be respectful of one another.
- Practice civility during disagreement.
- Protect your privacy. This is a semi-public space, so please do not disclose sensitive or confidential information.

- Avoid political discussions on topics outside of the theme of the Slack.
- Don't be hateful. Racism, sexism, homophobia, transphobia, and other types of prejudiced language and slurs are not allowed. Threats of harm or violence towards an individual or group of individuals are not allowed.

If you witness a violation of the Code of Conduct, please inform a moderator so that they can investigate. Depending on the level of offense, a warning may be issued to the offender. Repeat offenders will be removed from the Slack.

Moderators retain the right to remove offenders without warning to protect the overall safety of the group.
