Synopsis:

In a world of people born with powers, our protagonist seems like they are born without.

That however doesn't slow them down on a journey to becoming a hero. They push their bodies day-in and day-out in order to be one of the select few non-super powered heroes. However, through this effort it is discovered what his dormant power truly is.

The already impressive ability of the human body to adapt and get stronger has been amplified. Beyond that it looks like his body has no apparent limit on how strong it can get.

Meaning every break, cut, and burn makes them ever so slightly tougher. And every time they push themselves to the limit they will reach a slightly higher height.

Watch as our hero goes through grueling daily training, pushing himself to the brink of death, all to gain the smallest increase to his strength. On this road to becoming the strongest hero and potentially even saving the world.

Watch as they truly become — Limitless.

Logline:

A Battle Shounen where the main character's body adapts to whatever trauma or training it goes through. But only by pushing its limits relatively higher based on the severity of the damage it takes beyond the breaking point.

A hero's journey where the hero must undergo harsh physical and mental turmoil in order to be the hero they feel they must become. To be a hero strong enough to protect what only they can protect. The Hero Limitless will be tested over-and-over in every imaginable way, seeing if any given trip past the breaking point will be the end, or if they truly are limitless.
