Personality

- Magpie is a very kind, expressive, and creative cat. She is incredibly patient and is happy to wait without a single complaint or thought about it, but that often leads to her being VERY indecisive, unable to make choices quickly for the life of her. They are passionate about what they do, and are happy to teach others about the art of creating trinkets. Magpie can be quite obsessive and often collects shiny rocks and things to hoard and organize in her nest, able to go on and on about each thing without stopping; she doesn't quite know when to quit talking and sometimes rambles on even after cats leave them. Magpie enjoys helping others and following the crowd.

YHistory

Early Life

- Magpie was born to her parents, Parrot and Cockatoo, with two siblings named Owl and Heron. Her family and group have always used the names of birds, and apparently she's not the first "Magpie". This group was the friend of a murder of crows, and they often helped each other.
- Life went on as usual in the group, Magpie growing up to love birds and shiny things. She loved to collect the trinkets and rocks that the crows brought sometimes, and often wore them as accessories. Magpie would come out as a demigirl to her family and was of course met with love and support. She loved her family and group, but as time went on... they wanted for something more.

Adulthood

- After talking with their family, it was decided that Magpie should take some time away; maybe find somewhere else to live.
- With that Magpie was off, to find her own way. On her adventures she followed birds, the flying creatures somehow leading her to a barn, where she decided to stay for a while. The prey there was plentiful and brave, not having to deal with predators much. She would stay there for what felt like forever, until a dog decided to move in... Magpie was uncomfortable sharing the space, despite the dog being rather friendly, and left, off traveling again.
- Magpie would be traveling for some months when she ran into a cat named Mayfly, who mentioned they were making a new "colony". Huh. That sounded fun! They were happy to go with them, following eagerly behind Mayfly.
