Who am I, and what do I write?

My name is Erin (though you may have seen me under the handle @Jindujun93), and I'm a writer who specializes in original stories, usually treading either into yuri or gender bending as far as genres go. I like writing sweet, wholesome stories, but can go for something more spicy as well if the situation calls for it. I've got experience both with writing mundane, slice of life-ish stories as well as things set in more of a fantastical universe. I rarely write actual fanfiction, though it happens once in a while.

What would the process of commissioning me look like?

- If you're interested, send me a direct message on Twitter! We can talk about whatever idea you have in mind and get the details sorted out, so that I know what it is exactly that you want me to write. That includes a rough word count that you want for your story, or what the budget you're willing to spend on it is. My rate for stories is 11$ per 1000 words, though if I really like an idea, the price might be negotiable by a little.
- When sharing your story idea, I'm flexible. Do you only have a rough idea that you want to see, and want to be surprised by the finer details? That's perfectly fine! Do you already have a clear mental image of the scenario and want to go into the specifics? By all means, that works as well! Of course, I also offer the option of pitching you some ideas that come to mind for your rough idea if you want to plan it together with me! Things like reference images for whatever character you want to see written is always appreciated as well, in case you want me to write your OCs.
- After the idea is set and I've accepted your commission, I'd request a small portion of the final payment via paypal up front to make sure you actually have an account there and can pay me once the whole thing is finished. People who have commissioned me before are exempt from this, and can pay for the entire thing once it is finished instead.
- Once I've started writing, you can request the current progress of the story at any time to see whether the direction I'm taking the story into is indeed what you have in mind.
- Finally, after the story is finished I will ask for the rest of your payment. Once received, you will receive the PDF file of the story (or the ODT document, if you prefer that), sent to a mail address of your choice. You are free to do with this story whatever you want- you can keep it private and only to yourself, you can share it with friends, and you can even upload or repost it elsewhere under the condition that you properly credit me as the author of the story.

What are my stories like?

Since not everyone has read the stories I have written in the past, I've taken it upon myself to link to a few samples of more recent stories of mine, most of them commissioned by friends (some of them featuring their OCs). Feel free to have a look - and if you like what you see, feel free to contact me regarding any commission ideas you may have!

Bliss in Home and Bed (Yuri, featuring OCs, ~3900 words)
A valentine's story (Yuri, featuring OCs, ~4000 words)
A lady and her maid (Yuri, ~10200 words)
A dress for a princess (Yuri, ~11900 words)