Adamas keeps on walking back and forth in front of the opening which the Ridgewalker disappeared into. His patience has definitely run out. The whole group can feel it. But he has to wait. He will get his ass handed to him if he finds the Ridgewalker when he is alone. So he agreed to wait, until Azi could get Caelum back on his feet again. Which seems to be harder than she thought. The dragon is still lightly shaking all over from the shocks that entered his body.

When she thinks back to all the lightning slashing through the air, she knows it is a miracle that he is still alive. The lightning hit him hard, to the point that he almost could have gotten roasted right in the air. Apparently most of it must have missed him. But still he feels horrible, and it is killing Azi seeing him this way. When he just hit the ground she could barely touch him. It shocked her whole body. She could only just watch him, in the beginning. It hurt her a lot. But now she is able to carefully touch him and heal him back to health again.

The sun is burning on their backs, and to not make him feel any worse than he already does, Aslac has spread his wing, to hide Caelum for the most part from the sun. He can almost feel the sun burning through his wing, but it could barely be worse that what Caelum must be feelling, so he keeps his wing in position.

After a small while, Azi has been able to heal Caelum almost completely. He slowly stands up, with a bit of her help. He stands on wobbly legs, but he is standing. After a moment he is standing a bit straighter and more confident. His pain slowly fades away and he is able to look around with clear eyes again. Azi moves away from him after a moment, to let him stand on his own. Aslac retracts his burning wing and turns so it is a bit hidden away from the lowering sun.

The light around them becomes even more orange hued. The sun slowly starts to lower to the ground, heat waves floating in front of it make for a beautiful sunset this evening. The dragons can feel the temperature slowly dropping a bit, and they enjoy a moment without the scorching sun on their backs.

The sun shines bright onto the rock formations Admas is still walking around. It also leaves hard shadows, making it hard to peek inside the tunnels they can not enter. The light is slowly dimming a bit, making it a tad harder to look around. The sand instantly cools from underneath their feet.

And just when Caelum was going to suggest options to lure the Ridgewalker out of the rocks again, a builder right next to Adamas gets pushed hard right onto him. The dragon gets crushed under the rock and starts wheezing. He can not breathe from underneath, and frantically tries to push it off of him.

Aslac and Caelum quickly dash towards him to help push the builder off of him. They use all their strength to push it up, and Adamas is quickly able to scramble away from underneath it. He pants heavily, trying to get some oxygen back into his crushed lungs.

Azi is busy staring right at the Ridgewalker who pushed the builder with incredible strength over Adamas. The feline that was standing next to her instantly jumps on her back, in case she will turn around and fly away from the hostile dragon. It does not want to be left behind.

Azi takes a few steps backward and takes on an intimidating stance. She is almost two times bigger than the dragon and hopes it will work on it. Only the dragon does not seem intimidated and only advances toward her while the others are busy helping Adamas.

Azi opens her mouth widely and a bright stream of dangerous light flies straight towards the Ridgewalker. The dragon quickly dashes to the side and looks back at her, clearly a bit confused. It only has a second of confusion, and starts running once again.

The feline on Azi's back tenses again, and she can feel the nails of the animal clawing in her back. She winces softly and quickly sends another beam of light flying towards the dragon. It dodges it again and keeps on running.

Azi quickly turns around and starts to sprint. She takes off into the air, the one place where it can not follow her.

When she looks back she sees that Aslac has grabbed its attention again. He has spit dangerous poison at it, missing it barely. The dragon runs at Aslac and he snarls back at it.

Caelum slams into its side when the dragon almost reaches Aslac. He sends it sprawling through the sand. After the dragon tries to stand back up again, Admas slams it back down with a whip lash of his tail.

The Ridgewalker growls and quickly stands back up again. It lashes out with its teeth and gets a grip on Adamas' tail. It tugs hard on it and tears the flesh open. Adamas roars out and tries to get free from the dragons grip.

Caelum quickly dashes toward the Ridgewalker, making it release Adamas to focus on Caelum. When the dragon looks at Caelum, Aslac quickly lashes out with his tail and hits the dragon with his talons on it. The Ridgewalker is a bit too fast and just able to jump away from his attack. It runs out of the little circle they have formed around it and makes itself big. Growling hard at them.

Azi looks at them from the sky, and she wonders, will this dragon ever give up? Are they even able to beat it? Every time she thinks they finally got it, the dragon pulls out another trick and gets the upper hand again. Its making her frustrated. She just wants this to be over with.