

Meggan Saragoza is a second-year college student at American River College, majoring in English. With a deep passion for storytelling and poetry, she draws inspiration from the rhythms of everyday life and the complexities of family. As a proud member of a blended family of seven, Meggan often explores themes of connection, identity, and resilience in her work. The poems appearing in the Journal are her first published pieces, reflecting a voice shaped by lived experiences and a love for the written word.