

Mrs. Jane Haggert. The fate of this unfortunate woman affords a specimen of Indian barbarity scarcely paralleled in the annals of any country. Mrs. Haggert was the wife of John Haggert an early settler at Eatons Station, he had brought his wife with him from the older settlements where he had married her in the month of 1778. Mrs. Haggert then with her husband living at Mayfields Station, was with several of her neighbors going to Nashville, was shot and killed, her scalped head was scalped, her body was cut open in a most inhuman manner, and the infant of her pregnancy torn out and in this situation she was found on the road by her husband and friends. She left three children.

Mrs. Jane Haggert. The fate of this unfortunate woman affords a specimen of Indian barbarity scarcely paralleled in the annals of any county savage warfare. Mrs. Haggert was the wife of John Haggert an early settler at Eatons Station, he had brought his wife with him from the older settlements where he had married her In the month of 1778 Mrs. Haggert then with her husband living at Mayfields Station, was with several of her neighbors going to Nashville, was shot and killed, her ~~scalped~~ head was scalped, her body was cut open in a most inhuman manner, and the infant of her pregnancy torn out and in this situation she was found on the road by her husband and friends. She left three children.
