

Activity Guide - Rating Websites

Directions:

Think about this: you and your family are trying to decide where to get dinner. You are looking at restaurants online to help you make your decision. For each website, you will think about how well it helps you decide where to get dinner.

You and a partner will work together to rate websites on how well they achieve their purposes.

1. Go to the "Rating Websites" level on Code Studio.
2. Open each website one at a time.
 - a. Decide with your partner if and how well the website achieves its purpose.
 - b. Identify at least three features of the website that support your rating, and record those features.

Website Number	How well did it help with your decision? (Circle One)	Reason For Your Rating
1	Excellent Pretty Good Room for Improvement Not at All	1. _____ _____ 2. _____ _____ 3. _____ _____

Website Feedback:

Feedback is an important part of creating any product as it allows creators to reflect on their work, define changes they want to make and prepare for future improvements. Creators need good, actionable, and thoughtful feedback in order to make improvements.

Pick one website and give feedback to the creator of that website using the I like, I wish, What If model.

Website Choice: _____

I Like

The first thing you should do when giving feedback is identify things that you like about the product. There is always something nice you can say. All of these should be written starting with "I like.."

I like... _____

I Wish

After you have said the things you like, you can then share some ways the creator could make their product even better. All of these should be written starting with "I wish..."

I wish... _____

What if

Lastly, you should give your creator some new unusual ideas to consider for their website. All of these should be written starting with "What if..."

What if... _____
