Transcript and Visual Description

Frame	Narration	Visual Description
1	Welcoming a new baby is joyful.	Three smiling caregivers, an older Black female, and two younger Black individuals holding an infant.
2	It can also be stressful. Racist and inequitable systems make it hard for families to access resources like food or stable housing and figure out a confusing healthcare system.	Thought bubble coming out of caregivers, showing icons of food, a house, and clipboard with a stethoscope around it.
3	DULCE can help. How? A family with a newborn is supported by a Family Specialist on their parenting journey and is connected to the resources they need.	Caregivers talking with a Family Specialist in a clinic waiting room. A Latinx mother and father in the background sitting on a couch while their child plays with legos on the carpet. The Latinx mother is holding an infant.
4	The Family Specialist identifies needs alongside the family like housing, food, or mental health...	In the clinic room, one caregiver talking with the Family Specialist, another caregiver watches as a medical provider examines the infant with a stethoscope.

	...and then collaborates with an interdisciplinary team to come up with solutions. The Family Specialist offers solutions directly to the family who decides what's best for them.	Video conference call with the Family Specialist, early childhood representative, medical provider, and mental health representative. The Family Specialist has thought bubble of the caregivers, and the rest have thought bubbles of food, clipboard, and an icon of a head.
5	The Family Specialist offers solutions directly to the family who decides what's best for them.	Side-by-side panel, Family Specialist calling caregiver while caregiver holds sleeping infant.
6	Navigating these systems alongside families lowers their stress and gives them more time and energy for their baby. Families graduate from DULCE with more resources and more confidence navigating the health system. Hooray!	Caregivers in the living room, one is holding the smiling infant up in the air.
