

Lecturas en literatura y lengua premodernas peninsulares

David Wacks, Profesor de Español, Universidad de Oregon

These units were prepared for use in a study abroad course given in Oviedo, Spain (August 2020) [canceled due to COVID-19] that combined the study of premodern Peninsular languages and literatures. Each unit begins with a relevant news story taken from Spanish newspapers, an introduction to the language, literature, author and/or work excerpted, and a pedagogical edition of a selection of a primary text, with translation into Castilian in most cases. I've tried in most cases to link the premodern past to the sociolinguistic situation of contemporary Spain.
