SERIOUS ILLNESS SUMMER CAMP CLOSING AND REFUND POLICY - SUMMER 2024

Due to the serious nature of COVID-19 or other serious illnesses, the following policy is related to the potential of closures due to an illness outbreak.

Policy: Closing Due to Illness

- Corinthian University reserves the right to close camp due to an outbreak of staff/participants exhibiting symptoms of COVID-19 or other serious illness, regardless of a positive COVID-19 test. This does not mean that the course will automatically close. A decision of this nature would be made on a case-by-case basis based upon the specific facts and in consultation of the program's senior management.

Policy: Summer Camp Refunds

As we need to properly plan and staff for camp each day, we have historically not provided refunds for camp fees due to illness. Nevertheless, due to the serious nature of the COVID-19 pandemic, we are implementing a refund policy for 2022 as follows:

- Weekly camp fee refunds would be provided for participants who test positive and are required to quarantine based on CDC and local guidance
- In the instance a participant tests positive for COVID-19, which disqualifies the participant from returning to camp until a predetermined amount of days (as prescribed by CDC and local guidance), a refund would be provided for each date that participant missed (pro-rated based upon how much was prepaid for those dates).
- There may be instances when a participant is sent home sick; however, there is no known diagnosis of COVID-19. In these cases, refunds would not be provided to the sick participant nor to any other participant who decided not to attend camp.
- Registration fee refunds would be made on a case-by-case basis based upon whether the registered participant was able to attend any dates of camp due to a COVID-19 closure.
