So in an age where we have mobile phones with multiple filters on and it's so quick and easy to change an image, how do we think Rembrandt would have taken to such technology?

Do you think he would have quite easily flipped the image in different ways and added different filters to get across a different message from the picture that he's trying to provide for us here.