Abstract: Write your abstract here. Note: the abstract submitted to JALIE Journal should be concise and factual containing the research objectives, the research methodology, the findings and the main conclusion. It should be presented separately from the article, so it is independent. For this reason, references are not necessarily needed. Also, the use of abbreviation should be avoided; if it is necessary, it should be defined in the initial part of the abstract, e.g. Universitas Islam Negeri (UIN). In addition, the abstract should not contain picture(s) or table(s), yet using single space, Garamond, font size 11, spacing after paragraph 6, and a maximum of 200 words.

Keywords: write your keywords here. Keywords should contain the general terms and be plural. Acronym should be effectively used (legal abbreviations used in the field that meet the requirements). These keywords will be used for indexation and written in single space, using Garamond, font size 11, spacing after paragraph spacing 6, and 3–5 phrases.

Introduction

Your text is here, the manuscript should be written in English, using garamond in 12pt font-size, single line-spacing; don't add space before and/or after paragraph. It is much better to not format your text in a specific technique, instead, just leave it plain except that you really need to type certain words in a "special method", or to emphasize certain word or words. Italic is a must in typing non-English word. Arabic Word is transliterated based on joint decree of three ministers style, which is available for download in PDF file format. A direct quotation is like this:

"Please explore in more words the background of your paper and your current research position among other research on related themes. You should discuss here as well your research's relations with those of other researchers; literature review, especially on most relevant, newly academic works published in high reputation journals, is a must."

The introduction should cover 5 subs. Sub 1 outlines a general introduction to the topic. The author must also describe the importance of the topic. General introduction and importance of the topic refer to several sources. Sub 2 outlines some previous research related to the topic. We recommend that you use an updated reference (last 5 years). References are referenced from internationally reputed databases (we prefer). These databases include Sciencedirect (<https://www.sciencedirect.com/>), Springer link (<https://link.springer.com/>), Taylor and Francis (<https://tandfonline.com/>), Sage Publishing (<https://journals.sagepub.com/>), or Arabic Journals and Proceedings such as JALIE (https://ejournal.unkafa.ac.id/index.php/jalie-unkafa/issue/archive_ or ANCOLT (<https://ancolt-pekanbahasa.unkafa.ac.id/index.php/proceeding/issue/archive>) etc. In sub-3 outlines the gap (gap analysis) of previous studies. The author must also write the difference between the submitted article and the previous article (previous research). In sub 4, the author must describe the research objectives. research contributions must also be written in this sub-4. The last sub (5) contains the organization of articles in each section (a little bit of exploration on the flows of your discussion and the expected final results will be good points for closing this introduction section).

The citation format used in this article is the Chicago Manual of Style 17 edition (full note) displaying DOI and /URL/ISSN.

Literature Review

This section explains the core concepts of the research and defines key terms within the research context, referring to relevant academic literature. This section can be explained in several sub-chapters.

The most important aspect of this section is not just summarizing but synthesizing: connecting research to form a logical flow. It demonstrates the contribution of the literature in building a theoretical framework for the research being written.

Method

The Method section describes in detail how the study was conducted, including conceptual and operational definitions of the variables used in the study. Different types of studies will rely on different methodologies; however, a complete description of the methods used enables the reader to evaluate the appropriateness of your methods and the reliability and the validity of your results. It also permits experienced investigators to replicate the study. If your manuscript is an update of an ongoing or earlier study and the method has been published in detail elsewhere, you may refer the reader to that source and simply give a brief synopsis of the method in this section.

In this Part, authors should follow the direction: (1) Use Past Tense; (2) Justify why each one of your methodological choices is appropriate and scientifically sound. (3) Sampling: target population, research context, units of analysis, respondent demographic and behavioral profile, sampling method (disadvantages for generalizability, target sample size and how to determine, realized sample size, response rate, number of questionnaires etc.

Results and Discussion

In the Results section, summarize the collected data and the analysis performed on those data relevant to the discourse that is to follow. Report the data in sufficient detail to justify your conclusions. Mention all relevant results, including those that run counter to expectation; be sure to include small effect sizes (or statistically nonsignificant findings) when theory predicts large (or statistically significant) ones. Do not hide uncomfortable results by omission. Do not include individual scores or raw data with the exception, for example, of single-case designs or illustrative examples. In the spirit of data sharing, raw data, including study characteristics and individual effect sizes used in a meta-analysis, can be made available on supplemental online archives. Discussing the implications of the results should be reserved for presentation in the Discussion section.

The discussion of article aims to: (1) answer the problems and research questions; (2) show the ways the findings obtained; (3) interpret the findings; (4) relate the finding results to the settled-knowledge structure; and (5) bring up new theories or modify the exist theories.

Conclusion

This section should not simply repeat the main findings and discussions but should attempt to draw conclusions that can be based on the findings of the study and under the light of the current knowledge.

The conclusion of the research should serve the urgent purposes of the study within this section. This can be followed by suggesting the relevant future studies.
