Dear Elected Official.

Use of eminent domain for the purposes of bike and pedestrian infrastructure was prohibited in 2017. A new proposal promises to restore this authority. Without this tool, Wisconsin risks losing a vital tool for making connections between existing trails and ensuring Wisconsin remains a premier outdoor recreation destination. Restoration of eminent domain is essential for safer, healthier, and more prosperous communities across the state.

Because of the benefits that an active lifestyle brings to our bodies, communities, and local economies, it's important that we restore this authority through the new bill. I ask that you please work with your colleagues in the legislature to support the newly introduced bill and support the state's ability to make use of eminent domain for active transportation purposes.
