BEFORE HENRY WHEATON, ROBERT SWANTON,

SHAVING—ASSAULT AND BATTERY.

PETER DUFFIE v. GEORGE MATHEWSON, &c. &c.

This was an action of assault and battery, alleged to have been committed on board the British ship Thomas, of Lancaster, while on the high seas, of which ship Mathewson was the Captain, the other defendants seamen, and the plaintiff one of the passengers. It appeared that the ship came from the chalky cliffs of Albion, with a number of passengers, and arrived on the Banks of Newfoundland. The sons of the deity who rules the wide domain through which they had past in safety, with joy breathing in every eye met and conferred. By a recurrence to ancient legends, coeval with the common law, and among them of greater validity, it was found, that as often as a landsmen came in view of the Banks before them, he must produce a bottle of old Cognac or rum, as an acceptable sacrifice to Neptune. The nature of the sacrifice was explained to the landmen, and the greater part complied with a requisition sanctioned by immemorial usage; the defendant, with others, refused. Whereupon the seamen invoked the god with sad complaints;

"O omnipotent father, King of the Ocean, behold the rebellious sons of Terra, who have dared to intrude into thy dominions, refusing to bend before thy divine altar, and to render to thee all accustomed libation. Their hearts, O father, are long, uncouth, and indecent; retained by them in defiance of thy laws, and in defiance of thy divinity."

The Father of Ocean heard, and lifted his awful

"O omnipotent father, King of the Ocean, behold the rebellious sons of Terra, who have dared to intrude into thy dominions, refusing to bend before thy divine altar, and to render to thee all accustomed libation. Their beards, O father, are long, uncouth, and indecent; retained by them in defiance of thy laws, and in defiance of thy divinity."

The Father of Ocean heard, and lifted his awful head above the sublime waves, attended by the Tritons, the Nereides, and all the daughters of the azure main. He saw his children, and thus responded to their complaints, through a brazen trumpet, whose reverberations shook the distant promontory of Chapeau Rouge, and re-echoed through the spacious bay of Placentia:—

"Carry these impious mortals from my presence—behold their beards, which they dare to retain in despite of my authority!—They shall be shaved."

"Si fata sinant."

He said, and taking his razor and shaving-box from his car, while Amphitrite held his horses, he seized the prow, and ascended by the head-rails into the lofty ship. His presence inspired his children with joy. But while imparting his commands through his brazen trumpet to the crew, the landsmen below trembled—"Bring hither that tub, and fill it with sea water." 'Twas done.—"Bring forth the long-bearded tribe, one by one." The command was obeyed; but Duffie, when it came to his turn, was inclined to be refractory, and resisted; but who can resist when Gods command? The razor used by his Godship was manufactured in the caverns of Ætna, by one of the Cyclops, from an iron hoop: and though somewhat rough on the edge, did good business. Held above the tub, Duffie underwent the operation with streaming eye, while the most unsavoury smell from the lather entered his nostrils. As soon as the office of the razor was accomplished, and the awful oath, which binds even gods above, was administered, the tub below received him; the ceremony was done, and the god descended into the bosom of the "vasty deep." It appeared that a lady passenger, named Ann Jones, was sub-smell from the lather entered his nostrils. As soon as the office of the razor was accomplished, and the awful oath, which binds even gods above, was administered, the tub below received him; the ceremony was done, and the god descended into the bosom of the "vasty deep." It appeared that a lady passenger, named Ann Jones, was subjected to the same ceremony, the humour of which was enjoyed by Duffie, in common with the others. Markwell (one of the defendants) personated Neptune, and the Captain acted in the capacity of assistant to the Deity, and was aiding, abetting, and assisting in the ceremony.*

After the arguments of the Counsel, Mr. Justice Swanton charged the Jury, that it was the duty of the master of a ship to treat his passengers with attention and politeness. The Captain stood in the same relation to the passengers as a master of an inn or hotel did towards his guests. Having the superintendence of his vessel, the law had invested the Captain with the authority necessary for preserving peace and good order. On this occasion the Captain not only failed in treating the plaintiff with a becoming decorum, but countenanced and actually had some agency in the injury charged in the declaration. The conduct of the defendants towards the plaintiff was highly reprehensible.— After taking into consideration the wounded feelings of the plaintiff on the one hand, and the circumstances of the defendants on the other, it would be the duty of the Jury to render such a verdict as they considered just and equitable. The Jury rendered a verdict in favour of the plaintiff for 48 dollars.

• Whenever a vessel arrives on the Equator, or any remarkable head land, where the raw hands and passengers on board have not been before, the seamen, according to an old usage, frequently proceed to the ceremony of shaving, which is thus performed:— One of the crew, who is the best calculated for drollery, is habited in a fantastic, ridiculous manner, and with a speaking trumpet in his hand, personates old Neptune. He goes forward to the bow of the vessel, while those who are to be shaved are kept below, and descends until, perhaps, he reaches the water, and from thence ascends on deck, pretending to have emerged from the ocean. He hails the crew with his trumpet: answer is made, and mutual congratulations pass between his godship and the old seamen. He proceeds to order the requisite apparatus for shaving, which generally consists of a piece of iron hoop, a composition for lather made of slush and other offensive matters, and a tub of water. The persons who are to be shaved are then brought on deck, one by one, blindfolded. Those who have treated well are shaved light, while those who are refractory are shaved hard. After shaving, his godship proceeds to swear the novice to divers singular observances, one of which is, that he “will never eat brown bread when he can get white.” The one shaved is then either immersed in a tub of water, or has a bucket full from above poured on his head, and the frolic ends.

1817 One of Committee in New York with Thomas Addis Emmet, (Brother of Robert Emmett) to Promote the Welfare of the Irish

IRISH EMIGRANTS.

NEW YORK, NOV. 27.

Nothing scarcely can be conceived more distressing than the situation of an unfriended stranger arrived here from across the Atlantic, without the means of helping himself, and without even enough acquaintance with the men and things about him, to enable him to judge what path he should take to secure him from the miseries of absolute want. Such, however, is actually the situation of hundreds who annually land on our shores. To provide for these forlorn beings, several attempts have been made by associations of humane individuals here, but nothing hitherto has appeared so promising as that of which an account here follows:—

At a Meeting of Irishmen and the Descendants of Irishmen, held at Harmony Hall, on Tuesday, the 25th instant, for the purpose of promoting a Settlement of Irish Emigrants:

ANDREW MORRIS, Chairman,
WM. SAMPSON, Secretary.

Upon the motion of Thomas Addis Emmet, the Circular previously issued on this subject was read by the Secretary:—

CIRCULAR

read by the Secretary:—

CIRCULAR.

It is a sentiment long felt, and often expressed, that something should be undertaken on behalf of the Emigrants who flock to these shores.

Without any fixed destination, they remain in the sea ports until becoming victims of bad counsel and bad example, they lose the pure and honest energies with which they left their native land, and suffer worse than shipwreck in their moral qualities.

The Government of this great Republic is wellaware of the advantage to be derived from so great a mass of laborious industry, when usefully directed and employed—and of adding to the nation's strength, men whose attachment to the institutions of this country is assured by so many ties. But it is in the order of things, that some of the friends, particularly the countrymen of these emigrants, who have been some time established and known should come forward to attest the necessity, and guarantee the solidity of the enterprize.

If this has not been done sooner, it is because every advance in social improvement must come re in its season. It is the ripeness of the occasion, ne and the voice of time that now speak.

ee It has been remarked that among the lands u- now open for sale and settlement, there are to some tracts, particularly in the Illinois territory, ig where the Irish Emigrant, with the instrument to at which his hands are accustomed, and in a climate ns congenial to his habits, might procure to himself ot immediate shelter and subsistence—and, in a few as years, be able to repay with gratitude the benem fits conferred on him.

s, We, whose names are undersigned, have met o- to consult upon the means of promoting some ly establishment that might be a rallying point for ig the distressed, and give to the wanderer a habitac, tion and a home. We have thought of no bet-ne ter way than to address, by this Circular, the u- friends and well-wishers of Ireland, whose opery ration might give most weight to the measure; es and to submit whether it might not be advisea-a, ble to join all our efforts, and petition Congress A early in the ensuing Session, for a grant of suita-e, ble tract, upon a credit of 14 or 15 years, sub-id ject to such conditions and modifications as the Government may see most fitting.

ig To the Government we would offer no decepes tive, delusive, or precarious motive, rather el choosing to make its wisdom, benignity, and pain triotism, the anchor of our hope.

ne We request of you, if you approve of our senor timents and of our project, to advance and prove mote it by your best endeavours; either by form-to ing organized associations, or by obtaining st individual signatures, to a petition of the effect ch stated. We have not yet been able to digest a er plan, and have rather choose to make this hum-o- ble beginning, in hopes that we should soon re-it, ceive additional light upon the subject from the ne correspondence we solicit. We shall, nevertheless, proceed to investigate the subject, and challenge the co-operation of good and respectable men, and request of you to do the same.

You will please to address your answers, and any future correspondence, to Mr. James Moffit, No. 15, Frankfort-street, New York.

Mr. Emmet then stated, that he had been requested by the Gentlemen who called this meeting to explain the objects for which it was convened; that it could not be necessary to expatiate before those he was now addressing, on the situation of the peasantry and farmers in Ireland; it was at present one of unqualified misery, partly occasioned by their local oppressions, and partly by the general calamities of Europe; it compelled them to fly to those shores in such numbers and under the pressure of so great poverty, that the most active individual benevolence could neither provide them with a sufficient present succour, nor procure for them, within a reasonable time, the means of permanent settlement. The consequence was, that many of those unfortunate strangers were totally lost to this country, or forced by want to become noxious and dangerous to its cities, whose original dispoland, it was at present one of unquainted misery, partly occasioned by their local oppressions, and partly by the general calamities of Europe; it compelled them to fly to those shores in such numbers and under the pressure of so great poverty, that the most active individual benevolence could neither provide them with a sufficient present succour, nor procure for them, within a reasonable time, the means of permanent settlement. The consequence was, that many of those unfortunate strangers were totally lost to this country, or forced by want to become noxious and dangerous to its cities, whose original dispositions and qualifications, if rightly directed and employed, would have made them useful members of the community. Besides, the accounts transmitted back to Ireland of their disappointments and destitute situations, deterred many who were suffering at home the extremest wretchedness, from endeavouring to better their condition in this more fortunate and favoured land—to the political institutions of which they were also most strongly attached.

A very painful reflection on those circumstances had suggested to some Gentleman then present the hope that the general Government might be induced, by strong and united application, to grant a portion of its unsettled lands on terms liberal and bountiful, so that an asylum might be formed for industrious and enterprising farmers, who would gladly fly from famine and persecution to a spot where the sweat of their brows falling on a fertile soil would yield them a rich harvest, for their own exclusive benefit, and where they might peacefully enjoy all the blessings of that republican liberty they loved. The time for making such an application seemed auspicious; party asperities had softened down, and probably few would now be led by political prejudices to give it opposition. Neither was it unprecedented; a favour nearly similar had been granted to the French emigrants, and to settlers from Switzerland.
