What is the Community-Based Mental Health Collaborative? The Community-Based Mental Health Collaborative is a group of non-profit organizations who independently serve their Georgetown Community.

Need help making the connection to these organizations?

GISD can help connect families to the organizations within the group when mental health supports are needed and the family resources require low-cost options. While families may contact these organizations independent from GISD, our school district has created a process to help individuals make a connection.

Families who want help making the connection will provide information about their needs to a GISD Counseling Services team member. Once this information is gathered and permission is provided to do so, the information shared by the family will be sent to the members of the Community-Based Mental Health Collaborative. With this information in hand, representatives from the group who are not affiliated with GISD have the opportunity to connect with the family directly if their services match the needs of the family.

GISD and the Community-Based Counseling members hope this process will make connecting a family with counseling services as easy as possible. Unless given permission to collaborate by the family, the GISD support is limited to the initial connection between the family and the local counseling groups. The counseling groups operate independent of GISD and the school district cannot guarantee an outcome or assume financial responsibility for services should they occur.

Want more information about the Community-Based Providers?

Information about each of the organizations can be found below as well as a resource for families about what to commonly expect when engaging with therapeutic support.

Things to Consider When Choosing a Provider

Content provided by Central Texas Child and Family Counseling

Finding the right fitting mental health provider is important for getting the most effective treatment. Below are some tips on how to navigate the search.

Finding the Right Fit

Areas to consider when finding the right fit:

- Experience with a particular age group
- Training for a particular issue such as anxiety, depression, trauma or ADHD
- Ability to test, diagnose or medicate if you are seeking these goals
- Location and Availability- Your ability to attend appointments is essential and so finding a provider who is available and located near you is important. Ask about the times and days that are immediately and regularly available for appointments.
- Personal Considerations- Being able to connect with your provider makes a difference in mental health. If the opportunity is available, spend some
- Using your insurance provide, an online search engine (i.e. Google), or an online search engine specifically dedicated to locating mental health professionals (i.e. www.psychologytoday.com) to find a provider that fits what you are looking for. Call and email the provider and follow up after 24 hours.

Consider Payment Options

The cost of counseling varies greatly. Some options available for payment are:

- Free or reduced cost: Usually community-based services
- Out-of-Pocket: Payment directly to the provider at their full fee or sliding scale rate.
- Health Savings Account: Most providers can accept HSAs
- Insurance: In-network or out-of-network coverage for services.
- Employee Assistance Programs (EAPs) provided by employers

Learn about Insurance Coverage

Community-Based Mental Health Collaborative Members

The best way to learn about your coverage is by calling the number on the back of your insurance card and ask:

- What is my behavioral healthcare coverage?
- For my in-network and out-of-network benefits - Do I have a deductible to meet or a session limit?
- What are my out-of-pocket expenses (percentage, co-pay, etc....)?
- May I have a current list of in-network providers who specialize in____?
- What is the process for out-of-network reimbursement? Using out of network benefits will open many more options in finding a provider.

Obtaining Out-of-Network Insurance Coverage

The best way to learn about your coverage is by calling the number on the back of your insurance card and ask:

- At time of service, pay for therapy out-of-pocket and request a “super bill”. A “super bill” is the documentation of sessions, which will include the counselor’s license number, NPI number, billing codes and diagnosis codes. Mail this to the address provided by your insurer. Reimbursement often requires follow up, so you will want to document everything.
- Expect to wait- a standard length of time is 30 days, sometimes longer. Keep track of sessions and charges that are accruing.
- When you receive payment, compare your records. There is often a ‘window of appeals’ if something is incorrect.

What to Expect

When speaking with a provider at the first appointment, it is likely that you will spend time sharing about the area you are seeking support for and some of your history. You will also discuss limits, policies, cost, and needed forms (such as a “Super Bill” for out-of-network reimbursement, if necessary).

During the first few sessions, you and your counselor will work on defining your goals and the plan to get there. This is called the treatment plan. The treatment plan will be a rough outline of what to expect with your counseling experience and will be revisited throughout the process at various times.
