Goals	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Connect themes in literature to historical and contemporary examples 2. Use annotation and guided reading questions to increase comprehension 3. Analyze Themes, Characters, Plot, Symbols, Figurative Language, and author's style in a work of non-fiction. 4. Enhance critical thinking skills and elevate discussions to higher levels. 5. Participate actively in a variety of partner and group discussions. 6. Complete research paper/project, evaluating and gathering a variety of academic sources. 7. Write a cohesive research paper that incorporates a variety of sources, addresses an academic prompt, and defends a thesis, guiding idea.

Summative Assessment(s):	1. Fahrenheit 451 Reading Tests – Students will complete three summative assessment after reading each “Part” of the novel. The test will measure student understanding of plot, characters, themes, symbols, and literary strategies found in the designated “Part” of the novel. 2. Allusions Presentation – Students will be assigned a particular allusion included in Bradbury’s novel. Students will research the background of the allusion, introduce its reference within the context of the novel, and explain the connection/meaning of the allusion and why Bradbury included in the text. 3. Fahrenheit 451 Research Paper – Students will be assigned various topics to research relevant to current societal and historical contexts. After completion of the research process students will write an argumentative research paper.
Formative Assessments	1. Observations of student learning/ participation via a variety of discussion methods (Socratic Seminar, teacher-led class discussion, small group discussion, and paired discussion) 2. Classwork/Homework: Annotations of Fahrenheit 451; Annotations of various news articles and additional sources of non-fiction; Completion of Reading Guide Questions, Journal and paragraph writing. 3. Class Wrap Ups: Quick Quizzes – In Schoology Platform
Depth of Knowledge Levels Addressed:	The unit is very comprehensive, and all DOK Levels are addressed: Level One (Recall) – Define, Recall, Recite, Identify, Quote, Recognize - Reading Guides, Discussions, Tests

	Level Two (Skill/ Concept) – Infer, Classify, Compare, Categorize, Interpret, Summarize, Use Context Clues - Discussions, Writing Assignments Level Three (Strategic Thinking) – Construct, Explain, Hypothesize, Cite Evidence, Draw Conclusions, Develop a Logical Argument - Discussions, Writing Assignments, Presentation Level Four (Extended Thinking) - Analyze, Apply, Synthesize, Design - Discussions, Writing Assignments, Presentation
Social Justice / Real-life Connections:	In preparing students to read the novel Fahrenheit 451, the unit includes the review of various news articles and pieces of literature pertaining to censorship of knowledge and literature. Students read articles relating to the censorship of classic American novels because of the use of the “n word” and racism. Additionally, students read about Frederick Douglass’s experience in learning to read and the quench for knowledge and freedom that it incited. Students will connect this issue to a modern day example of censorship in examining a scholarly journal article examining censorship in the Communist Republic of China. Through the unit, Students will evaluate their opinion of censorship calling upon “real-life” examples and examples in the literature studies. In completing these pre-reading activities, students will be able to grasp Bradbury’s key ideas and themes throughout the novel and relate them to the material we have covered. The unit will culminate in a research paper that incorporates many of the themes discussed through many of the lessons.

Intro Schoology Discussion / Class Discussion:

Students will begin the lesson posting a short 4-8 sentence response on a Schoology Discussion Board. Students will then respond to the posting of another classmate. This posting/discussion will lead the way for an ensuing class discussion and will increase participation.

Schoology Discussion addresses the following question(s)

- 1) What does “freedom” mean to you?
- 2) How might the inability to learn to read contribute an individual's ability to experience freedom?

Following the Schoology Discussion, the teacher will lead a short class discussion and will attempt to dive deeper into the focus questions and review the vocabulary from the previous night's homework. The teacher will pose the quote “There can be no freedom without education” by Frederick Douglass and will elicit student responses.

Read Text – “My Bondage and My Freedom” – Read Text together in class. The teacher will call on students to randomly read. During the reading, the teacher will stop and ask students the following questions relating to human rights and social justice:

- “By far the larger part of the slaves know as little of their ages as horses know of theirs, and it is the wish of most masters to keep their slaves thus ignorant.” Explain the quote and why slaveholders might wish to keep their slaves ignorant. How does that violate basic human rights?

- Analyze a painting in the text and compare the image to Douglass's description of his initial upbringing. Then analyze what historical and societal factors at the time contributed to the hardening of Mrs. Auld and the change in attitude toward Douglass in the Auld household. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - What extreme measures does Mrs. Auld take towards Douglass. What do you suppose contributed to these actions? - View an illustration in the text and contrast how the idealized picture of plantation life compares to the reality of the institution of slavery. - Analyze the actions of Douglass's white playmates. What does his inclusion of their actions reveal about the attitudes of slavery. Is slavery and racism a natural thing or something that is learned? - Douglass intended his narrative to be read by both black and white audiences. What do you think his intention was describing his white playmates' attitudes toward slavery. -Revisit the initial discussion questions: How might the inability to learn to read contribute an individual's ability to experience freedom? "There can be no freedom without education" - Wrap up the discussion by connecting Douglass's experience to contemporary society. What groups in today's society are affected by lack of opportunity for literacy and what are the effects on their lives? Wrap-Up Discussion: Revisit the initial discussion questions: How might the inability to learn to read contribute an individual's ability to experience freedom? further instruction.

Students will then be told to read their quotes again, and then discuss the following with their partner:

- 1) What is going on in the context of the novel? (Who said it, When did they say it, To whom did they say this, Where did they say this? Why did they say this?
- 2) What do you think the quote means? What does it reveal about the character?
- 3) Can you relate this quote to today's society?

Students will discuss these questions about their quote with a partner and will also be responsible to take brief notes that cover their thoughts/ideas during the discussion

Students will then be ready to proceed to the writing focus of the lesson.

Finish Reading pgs. 103-110 in Class:

The teacher will call on various students to read. While reading, students will complete the remaining reading guide questions.

Paragraph Writing Assignment: Part 2 Paragraph Assignment

Developing a Thesis – Through collaboration and discussion, the class and teacher will develop a general thesis to use as guidance in writing their body paragraph.

Though student input will drive the discussion and formation of the guiding thesis, ultimately it should state something close to:

“Ray Bradbury depicts a mindless population that shuns human interaction and original thought in order to highlight the negative effects of technology and governmental control”.

Paragraph Writing – After being assigned a general thesis to use as guidance in writing a body paragraph, students will independently write an 11 sentence (3 concrete detail) body paragraph.

Before beginning, the teacher will review the assignment with students and will briefly mention embedding and citation format.

One concrete detail will likely be taken from the initial discussion, and students will be responsible for finding the other two.

Students will submit their finished paragraph and initial discussion/brainstorming notes to Schoology for

	teacher review when completed. If students are unable to finish during the class period. Students will participate in a brief revision the following class period. Lesson Wrap-Up: The teacher will restate the learning objectives for the day and will ask students a few general review questions about writing a paragraph, MLA citation. Students will then be reminded to submit both their completed paragraphs and intro notes when finished for homework if they have not done so already.

Students will begin the period by choosing a partner to begin a warm-up discussion. Each partner will choose one of the questions they designed for the seminar, present the questions to one another, and then each carry on a short discussion on the topic.

Socratic Seminar: Socratic Seminar Preparation Instructions

Following the warm-up activity, the teacher will instruct the class to form a large circle. The teacher will begin by posing a question to elicit student responses. Following discussion of this question the teacher will then have students ask questions.

Students will be instructed to follow the seminar rules and actively participate and elevate discussions by: Adding knowledge, Agreeing with a point, Disagreeing with a point, or explaining how they can see it both ways.

The teacher will begin the discussion with the following question:

In part 2 of the novel, Mildred and the neighborhood ladies are having a discussion in the living room. Mrs. Bowles states, "I voted last election, same as everyone, and I laid it on the line for President Noble. I think he's one of the nicest-looking men ever became president." What does this reveal about the voters in society? Are we like that today as voters?

During the discussion, the teacher will keep track of which students participate in the discussion and monitor the number of times each students speaks so that no one dominates the discussion. The teacher will additionally listen attentively to propose new questions that may build upon student ideas and provide opportunities for higher level thinking.

Additionally, at various times during the discussion, the teacher may ask the student to quietly discuss a topic or question with their neighbor on an assigned side.

To wrap up the discussion, depending on the productivity and level of participation, the teacher may ask all or select students. To post a question that was not asked in class and respond to another student on the Schoology Message Board.
