

Resource Ideas for 5 Themes of Geography

1. Library of Congress-Primary Sources (Great inference possibilities with their primary sources...mainly US so not as useable for Eastern Hemisphere)

These two may work:

<https://www.loc.gov/classroom-materials/usa-colorado/>

I imagine you could get some really great discussion of human impact on the geography of Denver and its region.

Questions like: Where do you think humans and the environment are interacting the most? Least?

How have populations in Denver changed over time? Draw your "modern" version.

Maybe check out google earth or find an updated map.

2. Book: Maps of the World: An Illustrated Children's Atlas of Adventure, Culture, and Discovery

You can get links to its gorgeous continent maps inside the book. There is a description for each icon too. I have the ocean book as well.

3. Colorado Encyclopedia- Local connections to geography and its impact. So many great things, I would love to help you dig out of this website and organization.

Azerbaijan is about twice as large as Denmark and slightly smaller than the U.S. state of Maine. This figure includes the disputed region of Nagorno-Karabakh. Azerbaijan is situated south of Russia in a region known as the Caucasus, which includes Azerbaijan, Georgia, and Armenia. The province of Nakhchivan, which borders Iran, is separated from the main part of Azerbaijan by Armenia. Mountains, including the Caucasus and Talysh ranges and the Karabakh Plateau, dominate three sides of the country. Between the mountains are valleys and lowlands with rich flora and fauna. Two major rivers, the K  r and the Araz, cross the republic. There are also a number of smaller rivers, lakes, and springs. Azerbaijan has a subtropical zone known for its production of pomegranates, pistachios, persimmons, figs, olives, and saffron.

The Caspian Sea forms Azerbaijan's eastern border. Enormous oil and natural gas reserves beneath the sea hold great wealth potential. The Caspian Sea also holds the majority of the world's sturgeon; this fish is primarily harvested for its eggs, which are processed and sold worldwide as caviar. Oil extraction, which began in 1870, has threatened their habitat, but efforts are being made to clean up the environment. Many cities suffer from severe air pollution.

Azerbaijan has a mild climate. Winters are short and cool, and summers are hot and sunny. The average July temperature is 80  F (27  C) in the lowlands. The average January temperature is 34  F (1  C) in the lowlands and 24  F (-4  C) in the highlands.
