Environment and Relationships
Features of effective practice
There are clear routines visible in the classroom, for example, welcome, check ins, review of lesson.
Staff consult with children and young people when there are changes to the routine, for example, "We are going to change the planned lesson today – is everyone ok with that?" OR "We have a visitor to our class later – are you all comfortable with that?"
There are clear plans for the day in the classroom which helps children and young people to know what is coming up.
	Learning and Teaching
Transitions between different parts of the lesson and different lessons are well managed, for example, children and young people are given clear warning and opportunities to get ready to move on.
