

Hey Josh,

Dylan here again.

Have you ever thought about what would happen if you suddenly stopped making these hauls?

What would change in your life? Is that a storm you're prepared to ride?

I'm not talking about retirement savings or rainy day fund... but a real concrete income source.

You could make the argument of "crossing that bridge when you get there"...

But being reactive has significantly less options when your situation is diar.

What I'm proposing wouldn't be an option for you at that point.

However, if you start now, while the iron is hot, you guarantee financial security for your family.

Nothing lasts forever. All it takes is getting deplatformed and it's over.

So build a following you OWN while the skies are still clear.

You have a solid foundation. Now let's reinforce your roof before the rains come.

Let's turn one day into day one.

Awaiting your reply,
Dylan Totilo