Introduction Times New Roman, Font 12, Normal, Spasi 1.15

The authors are asked to write the background of their works in four (4) parts. Firstly, state the empirical or theoretical problem which is the basis of your research. This could be written in one or two paragraphs.

Next, provide the recent studies in the area of your focus problem. These studies are needed to establish the state-of-the-art statement of your field of study and to identify the limitations of recent studies. This could be written in two or three paragraphs.

Then, identify the gap between the recent studies and the current empirical and theoretical aspect of your focused study. This could be written in one or two paragraphs.

Ultimately, state your research question and research objectives based on the gap analysis presented in the previous paragraph. Please state the novelty of your research. This could be written in one paragraph.
