Hazards Remain After Weather Clears

By Intrepid Reporter, Invented News Agency

COLUMBUS—Many Ohioans are looking forward to getting out and enjoying a little bit of nice weather before winter takes over. With temperatures this week swinging between 20s and 50s, moderate temperatures for the weekend will be welcome. After all of that rain, it will be nice to see a bit of sunshine as well.

Planning on going out to a park, maybe getting in a daytime hike? Be sure to enjoy yourself, but remember to stay alert to hazards.

St. Swithin Hospital's Dr. Brian tells us that weekends like this bring unique risks that are important not to forget. Pay attention to waterways, and remember that water can rise even after the rain has stopped. Beware of dangers from caves, landslides, and falling rocks if you're in the hills.

"A little bit of forethought goes a long way," said Dr. Brian.
