PART 1: Introductory Session-The Head or the Heart?
A Jewish Response to Ethical Decision-making
Tuesday, December 14 at 7 PM via Zoom

Presenters: Paul Root Wolpe, PhD., Raymond F. Schinazi Distinguished Research Chair in Jewish Bioethics and Director of Center for Ethics, Emory University

Moderators: Paulette Keifer, Executive Director at Jewish Community Foundation of Central PA; Noah Levine, Jewish Community

Legacy Project; Rebecca Robinson, Jewish Community Foundation of Central PA

For centuries, philosophers have debated how we should make ethical decisions.

Should we listen to our instincts, our emotions, our "kishkas"? Or should we use a rational system of ethical analysis? The question has been reinvigorated by some startling neuroscientific discoveries on how people actually make ethical decisions. In this talk we look at the debate and at potential Jewish contributions. A dynamic international speaker, Dr. Wolpe is a Harrisburg native and excited to share his knowledge with us!

Emily's Faith in Focus Column on Hanukkah from 11/18/21

"Hanukkah, the Jewish Festival of Lights, will arrive early this year. Hanukkah will start on Nov. 28 in the evening and last through Dec. 6; so the Jewish community has another set of holidays following one right after the other.

I am looking forward to Thanksgiving next week, when I will be with family in-person! It will be wonderful to be with those I love for a festive pot-luck meal. I think we have all felt a lack of family time over the last two years due to the pandemic. And that is perhaps the best thing we all can enjoy with all of our holidays – a time to be with family and the friends that sustain our lives." To read more, click here.
