

Hi, souldrivenlove here.

Not really a fan of being dragged into stuff I don't want to be apart of because I don't rllly enjoy fueling such hate like this, but I guess I kinda have to respond to this since people think I'm the type to 'push someone to sxicide' and 'harass people for a year' and whatnot.

A lot of new faces are probably watching my profile (and will be for a few days) because of a thread made by @UnPolyLua, so I'll start off by responding to everything there first.

For starters, yes, I am robotic_developer, founder & former owner of Friday Night Bloxxin'. It has been more than a year since I abandoned that name, and although I'm not quite comfortable with admitting to this secret of mine now, I kinda have to considering the circumstances.

The following is a repost of an announcement made in the Damnation dev server.

It took me so long to realize how awful of a person I've become back when I was still under that name, and when that realization struck, it felt like my entire world shattered instantaneously. I started struggling to wake up every morning even if it was just a regular, bland & boring day prior. It eventually got to a point where I found myself standing on the edge of life & death, so close to taking my life out of guilt b/c I was so deep into the delusion that there was no other way out of my misery. But then, souldrivenlove came into the world, and that instantly became my lifeline; it was my one and only chance to start anew and do all of the things I wish I would've done differently hadn't I been under the influence of those I surrounded myself with. It felt so freeing to be able to act as I've always wanted to act without anyone belittling me for it, even if I knew that my mask wouldn't be able to stay on forever. I finally lived without waking up to more people hating me for whatever crazy thing happened the night before; without being doxxed, swatted, assaulted irl, sent bomb threats, and so much worse. It was, and still is, perfect.

I don't want to stop living this life I've made for myself, but I also don't want to live as a liar forever. I've always wanted to come clean about this eventually but I never really knew when would be the best time to do it. I hope you all don't view me in too much of a different light now that the cat's out of the bag, eheh. But regardless of what you might think, I'll never stop trying to be the best version of myself, ever. Every day of my life has been so pleasant for the past year, and I vow to continue this lifestyle of mine for as long as I can manage. I love you all so much, just as I always have and always will. 💜

As for the next topic, I'd like to state that the worst thing I've ever done to upl was lie about my actual identity to them, just as I've done for more than a year now.

A lot of people are seeing me retreating from my past alias as 'cowardly,' but realistically, what e/se would you have done if you were constantly being swatted, doxxed, targeted, assaulted, sent bomb threats, and worse over your online presence? Would you have just sat there under the same alias responsible for all of that, enduring the same kind of horrible treatment constantly, during every other day? I changed identities to get away from the people who actively tried to cause me physical harm & to do better for myself and those around me, that of which upl disregarded entirely even after being confronted privately about the reason behind my identity.

You caused me to lose most of my friends and contact with others, you caused me to try off'ing more than 5 times in a span of 6 months. You hid yourself by creating a new identity to escape from everything you did on your past.

As for this claim, no, I was not responsible for you feeding into hate posts made about the game that you work on, nor did I ever encourage you to respond to those remarks made by strangers online. If anything, I discouraged interacting with them and encouraged you to instead focus on better, brighter things while you vented to me. What I saw you go through was horrible, and I'd never wish such a thing upon anybody unlike a certain AFN dev, but I will not allow you to pin blame for how you felt on me when it's entirely and completely untrue.

My friends were confronting you about wanting to reveal my identity to the world because they didn't want me or anyone I'm affiliated with to experience the same kind of pain that I went through back when I was being swatted constantly.

In the same screenshots that you took, they explained this to you, but it appears that your quick n' easy takedown on someone you don't like matters more to you than the safety of others, doesn't it?

@UnPolyLua

You never had remorse of your actions and you will never change as a person.

I would've showed more screenshots proving that you are hiding yourself under a new name. But i cant because i dont want to harm any of the victims you've also manipulated and used.

There is nothing I regret more in my life than the things I did back when I was still under a different name. Hearing about all of the aching that I've caused in so many different environments every so often always manages to inflict so much deep, deep guilt unto me like a radioactive toxin. I find myself struggling to sleep every so often because of everything I used to believe, because of the things I was taught were morally right, and because of how long it took me to finally snap back together and recognize that I became fucked. You know nothing about the conflicts I have between me and my inner self, and I find it vastly disrespectful that you think you can even utter a word about how I feel about myself because of that.

If you don't believe that I'm trustworthy, then I cannot shift your opinion. However, let it be known that the one time I ever shared anything from our DMs was to someone that I personally trusted with the intent of understanding how I could better help you out in a time where nobody else offered (according to you). I listened to you vent for hours on end, sacrificing time that I could've spent studying for tests, working on projects, or focusing on my own mental health for you. Do I regret it? Not at all. I'm happy that I could've lended a hand for when you needed it—I'm just disappointed that you see my actions of care and worry as ones of manipulation all because of you realizing my past alias. Not cool.

I don't really know what counts as "making fun of" in your view if I'm being honest.

Cuz if this is 'making fun of your attempt' then I dunno what to tell you. Literally in the same exact thread I say that I don't know how to respond to you doing something like that to yourself and that I feel like you need help. Do note that I'm saying this with knowledge of you being into cub & feral porn btw. (if this is news to you, then keep reading & I'll explain what I mean by this)

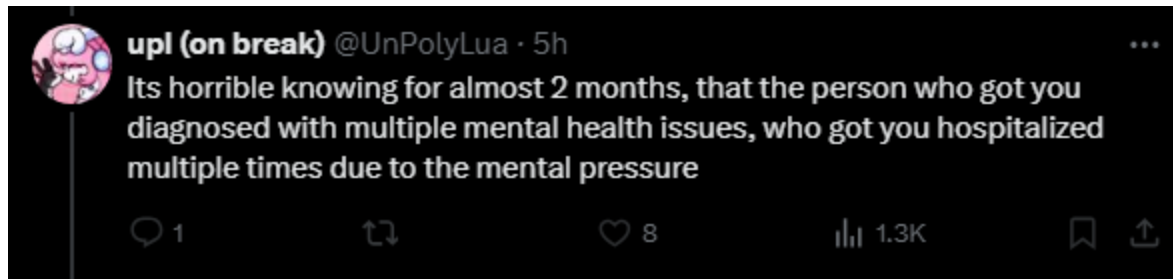

This is also something that I just straight up didn't do. Not really a fan of people lying about me lol.

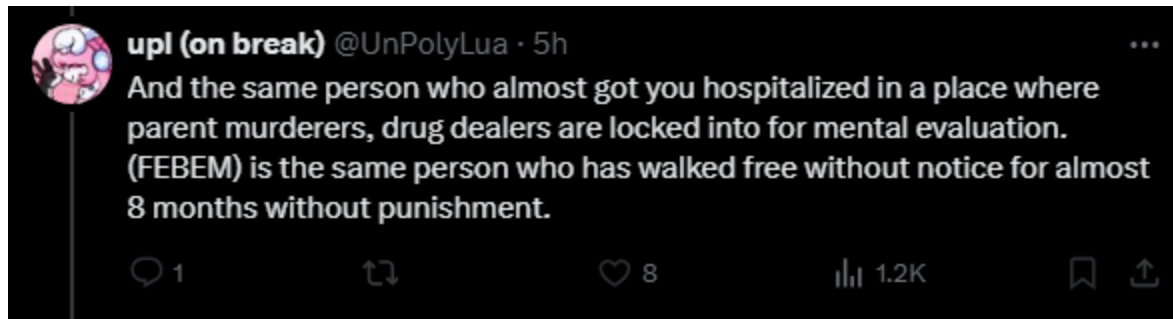

The replies highlighted by a yellow box are ones made by me. I'd love for you to identify the 'laughing' here, because from what I'm seeing, we all shared nothing but concern for your well-being.

I did not get you diagnosed with anything. I did not push you to suicide. I only listened to you when you were venting and responded accordingly as any good human being would have done. As unfortunate as it is to have happened, your issues were all inflicted onto you through your own actions. The reason why you were demoted in AFN was because of you constantly feeding into negativity surrounding the game, not because of me directly pushing you to do anything. As said before, I did nothing but listen to you when you needed it and respond with advice that would have helped you. I cannot put myself directly in your place and put that advice into action; that's your job that you refused to do.

Again, I did not get you hospitalized. I only listened to your venting and responded with advice that I thought would help. It's on nobody else but you for not doing anything about the situation that you put yourself in because you are the only person that'll ever be capable of doing that.

Also, I have suffered through more mental punishment than you ever will about anything you've done. I, unlike you with your feral + cub porn interests (again, if you're unsure abt what I'm referring to, I will explain later), am remorseful for every little bad action I've ever done in my life. I have spent so much time of my life crying to sleep at night over being the person I used to be, and I usually have such awful spirals whenever I do something even just barely similar to the things I did when I was little.

If I'm being honest, a lot of them know it's me. The main difference between them and you, though, is the fact that they understand that people in the real world experience positive changes to their own character after devoting time to bettering themselves.

I cannot even begin to express how much raw, unfiltered fury and vitriol I felt coursing through my body as I read this tweet for the first time. You mean to tell me that you, someone who actively consumes cub + feral porn, put the lives of myself and my friends at risk to swatters & doxxers, and yet you have the nerve to say that you hope I change as a person??? Are you fucking serious? You think I'm the one who doesn't deserve a platform—that I'm the manipulator here? You were confronted in July about your pornographic interests being directly related to bestiality, but your response to that was to just have another breakdown and shrug it off the next day. By that, I mean that you've been warned about your own behavior before, and you did nothing about it. Allow me to show you how awful of a person you are.

Note: Following this page, there will be censored images of feral + cub NSFW attached, with some posts having implications of rape in them. Please do not continue reading if you're sensitive to that kind of material.

This page is blank so that the warning above can be read without the reader accidentally viewing unwanted content.

You are worse than I have ever been. I sat down on my computer for hours listening to you vent about issues that could've all been prevented if you listened to anybody around you. I gave you an almost overwhelming amount of advice every time you reached out, and I always tried to figure out better solutions every time you'd come to me over the same few things. And yet, all of that meant nothing to you? All of that was just "manipulation" in your eyes? In what other way could I have ever possibly responded to you that you would've preferred? Be so fucking serious.

And not to even mention what you were doing behind closed doors. You mention all this about me being such a manipulative, deceitful person for hiding my identity out of fear that history would repeat & that I'd never truly become the best version of myself. Though, throughout all of that, you fail to mention that you've been hiding your morally reprehensible interests. I've tried keeping your degenerate activity on the down low in hopes that you'd eventually come to understand how disgusting it is, and yet you never did. So, does it feel good now that the world knows about your secret? Because I can bet that the skeletons in your closet are far fucking worse than mine.

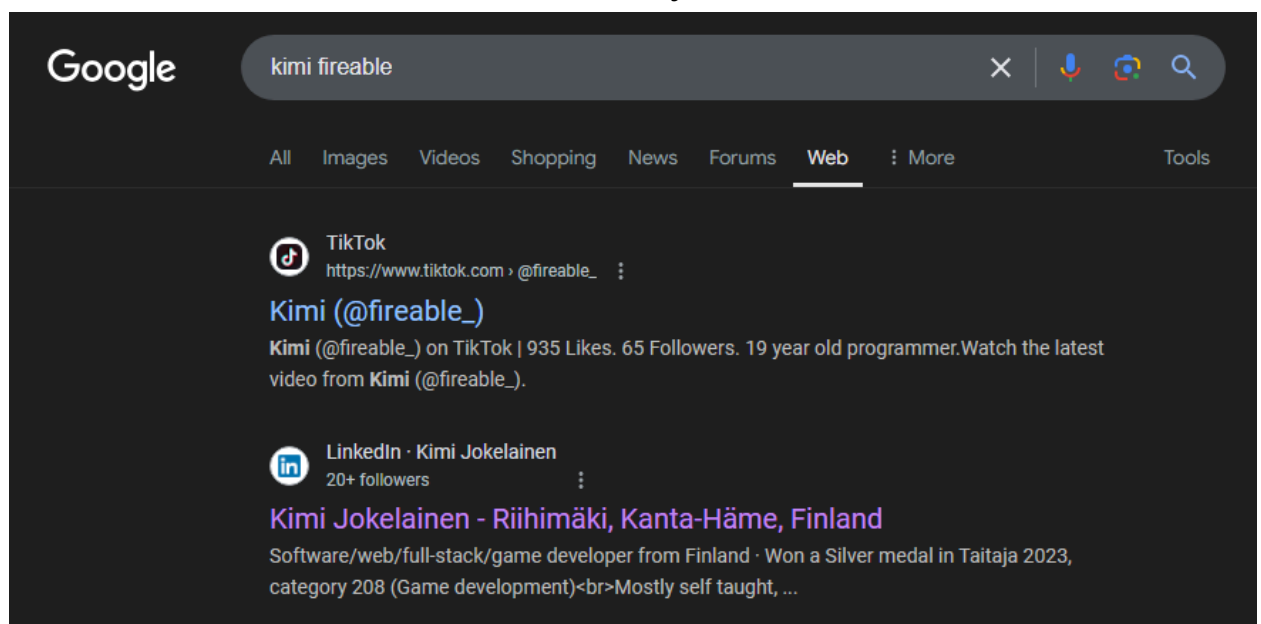

With the entire thread made by UnPolyLua out of the way, I'd like to explain and debunk a few claims made by the Afternight developers now since I don't want to make another long response to anything else anytime soon.

1. I have not harassed the AFN team. The worst I did to them was call out their now co-owner, Kimi, for cutting off a conversation that could've had the potential to help someone who really needed it (and who had just attempted suicide a few days prior to that conversation), allowing a doxxer onto the team with full knowledge of their background, making fun of someone who left the team due to the doxxer being hired, lying about my friends and I, wishing genuine death upon me (twice!), and censoring all activity regarding that callout. Is actively seeking an apology or at least just some kind of acknowledgement of their actions considered harassment to you?

2. I have not doxxed any of the developers ever in my life. The worst I ever did was look up “kimi fireable” on google and come across their linkedin because of how their entire online identity was linked to it. This information was not privately accessible nor was it illegally obtained. This is not doxxing, this is just the page creator, Kimi, being dumb. Had their information been on a site like doxbin, where information on there is typically illegally obtained, then I would have never even batted an eye at it.

3. I want to try and involve Ava in this as little as possible, though I want it to be known that she was never at risk of anything happening to her. I made it clear during our final few interactions that I would never do anything to put her in harm's way, no matter the situation. I still hold true to those values even in this time where I know she's trying to hurt me.

Something funny I want to identify in this announcement is that they never mentioned anything about not sending harassment my way. They focus so much on revealing my identity more than anything else, almost as if they know the consequences of what could possibly happen to me (swatting, doxxing, harassment, etc) afterwards. Very uncool of them to be so willing to put someone else's life at risk, but I guess I couldn't have expected anything more from Kimi considering what they've been responsible for.

Attached below are two documents regarding Kimi's behavior, one of which being responsible for me getting labeled as someone who's been "harassing AFN for the past year"

Link to a doc containing Kimi's recent actions \(that they've never been held accountable of even during the time of writing this\)

Link to a doc containing Kimi's past actions which still hold valid considering how similar they are to their recent actions

To conclude this whole mess, I want to state that if you aren't comfortable with knowing about who I am, then cool, but if you are, then that's cool too. I simply just want to be left alone. I never wanted to make something like this at all because I never wanted to be dragged into anything to begin with, but I guess that life just changes even when you don't want it to. I've done no moral wrong to AFN and especially not to upl, so this entire thing was all for nothing other than to just reveal to the world the one secret I wanted to keep out of fear that my life would be at risk again.

Also, regardless of what happens after tonight, I won't lose my drive to create games for people to enjoy. My latest projects have been coming along very well, and I don't intend for any of the events that transpired today to impact anything related to them. If you're interested in my works, then I promise that you don't have to worry about anything bad happening to anything. I've grown to have a very strong, durable mentality anyways, so I'll just walk off whatever people throw at me past this point.

As always, I'll love all of you with all of my heart, and I hope that you all have a safe night no matter what side you stand on in this entire thing.
