

I think friendship is really interesting. Some people will think that friends should "together" do a lot of things, but sometimes it backfires; Sometimes we will encourage each other, but we also compare with each other; Sometimes we are inexplicably angry about opponent's outstanding performance, perhaps angry about why I can't be as good as my friends; And sometimes we discuss the length of our lessons together. For me: as long as it is true friendship, it can stand the test, no matter what the big wind, big waves or small troubles, it can't separate each other. In the end, we will find that all the previous struggle and competition is futile, and eventually we will return to the original cherish each other's mode.

Can't a friend fight? Can't we be a friend after a fight? There is a saying: " Out of blows friendship grows." But to me it is: " Out of blows friendship grows, after friendship grows is still fighting." Sometimes it may be because of the concept, sometimes because of habits, resulting in two or even many people between the first encounter dispute, or years of friends fighting. In any case, for me, this can let each other get to know each other a little closer.

I have a friendship that makes people around me think that we cherish each other so much from the first time we meet, but we have experienced all kinds of big and small disputes, even now we still have a fight. When we first met each other, we broke down for a textbook, a birthday party. And every other day we used our own funny ways to apologize to each other. Which sounded childish, indeed! Now think about it is quite funny. But unexpected is: these two quarrels have created our irreplaceable friendship now! After that, we will also taunt each other for all aspects of excellent results, always say don't secretly hide to read, secretly practice all kinds of examinations and competitions, which in the eyes of others as bad behavior, for our group of friends can make each other more positive dialogue and encouragement. Because we all understand this seemingly ironic words, it is our group of not perceptual friends in our own way to praise each other and even learn from each other!

Even the couple who love each other will quarrel after marriage, so how can the friendship that comes out of squabbles become ordinary after one or two big quarrels? In the future, we often quarrel with each other for small things. Even a simple itinerary can spawn a cold war, do you think it's interesting or not? But it is also because of the unpleasantness caused by these small differences in daily life, let us know each other better through the apology and review afterwards, and know each other's likes and dislikes so that we can get along better in the future.

Every friendship is like this. It may be divided or combined in the noisy. Some things can let time and environment take us to experience to learn to understand to run in, but if it is really inappropriate, there may be no results. For me, every environment can meet new people, but there are very few real confidants, and some people are even can meet but cannot be asked. For me, I met so many people in the process of studying, but only these friends accompany still now. We experienced the wind and waves together, share life's ups and downs, so we also cherish each other and cherish our friendship!