Quirk

»Name: Electric

»Description: A quirk that needs electrolytes to be powered, a small section of the heart does not do its regular duties but instead it turns the electrolytes the user intakes into real working electricity, to use the user has to focus their energy to a certain part of the body Hands, Feet, Fingers Etc. The user is also able to charge a blast for bigger damage if needed

»Strength: Long ranged, powering things and items that need electricity, possible light source if needed

»Drawbacks: Not good in short range combat, If charged for too long it can end up being unstable, user isn't immune to being shocked so one wrong move can end up tasing the user.

“ Life is great you just have to look at the bright side! “

Backstory: Akemi was born into a family with one sister and two very loving parents, her childhood was normal, nothing too crazy, she went to school and she made friends but her teachers and friends noticed that Akemi wasn't really the smartest. She was bullied for it by other girls and then one day she snapped and she used her quirk to hurt them all, it had seemed that her emotions got the best of her but that wasn't it a week later her sister was killed. This bothered her forever but she had to move on, and she did. She went on to make it to academic life but her main goal was to be a hero so she attended UA! It's going great so far! She even made a small birthday party mascot performance company! Things were going great for her! And that's about it.

- she isn't really the smartest so it might be hard to get plans 100% right 100% of the time
