Q. 1 Read the following passage and answer the questions give below:

Amartya Sen was born in Shantiniketan in 1933. He was named 'Amartya' - 'the one who deserves immortality' - by Rabindranath Tagore, who was the first Indian to win the Nobel Prize. As a schoolboy in Shantiniketan, Sen thought variously of becoming a Sanskrit scholar like his grandfather, a mathematician another time, and a couple of years later, a physicist. But when he entered Kolkata's Presidency College, after topping the intermediate examination, he was in doubt about his true calling - Economics.

Destiny, perhaps, played an important part in his decision. As a boy of ten, he had witnessed the horrors of the Bengal Famine of 1943, a man-made catastrophe in which five million people died. He had seen people die in front of his house. He recalls 'The streets were full of emaciated looking faces and people were dying in very large numbers. It made me think about what caused the famine and when I took on the famine work in a formal way 30 years later, I was still quite haunted by the memories of that period.'

Amartya Sen is not only a distinguished teacher, he is also a prolific writer. He has authored 21 books, apart from nearly 200 research papers and articles. His writings reveal a fundamental concern with the well-being of people, particularly the poor. In one of his famous books - Poverty and Famines - Essay on Entitlement and Deprivation -, he has challenged the popular notion that famines are caused by shortage of food. According to him it is economic inequality and unequal distribution of resources which are the more urgent causes of famines in our country.

- 1) Who named him Amartya?
- 2) What does Amartya Mean?

Orissa is a state with beautiful thick forests and the famous Chilka Lake. It is well known for its great temples. The Puri Jagannath Temple and the Sun Temple of Konark are among the most remarkable architectural achievements of ancient India.

I firmly believe in the principle that whenever our company opens a development centre, the services of our Infosys Foundation must also be made available there. Thus Orissa became an area of activity for the Foundation. There is a lot of poverty in Orissa, and there are around 13,500 NGOs working there to help the poorest of the poor.

Orissa is a state where many tribal people dwell in remote, inaccessible areas deep in the interior of its dense forests. The women wear brightly coloured sarees - leaf green, bright yellow, dark red - and simply knot their jet black hair with flowers tucked in. It is a delight to see them when one is travelling inside the forests of Orissa.

Once I had to travel to Kalahandi. It is neither a town nor a city, and it is not known for anything special. It's just another part of another tribal district like Majur Bhunj or Koraput.

They say that before Independence, Kalahandi was ruled by a king. The tribals believed that the king was their caretaker and possessed supreme powers. They are so innocent that, even today, they don't believe that kings no longer exist. Even now, if a child is orphaned, it will be left at the doorstep of the collector's house. For them the ultimate protector is the raja.

Bhavani Pattanam is the district headquarters of Kalahandi.

Q. 2 Read the following passage and answer the questions given below (10)

A scarcity economy and a short-age of capital have made Indians inventive about improvising on inputs and reducing costs. In the Indian economic lexicon, nothing is entirely valueless," and everything is potentially of value. Indians do not take easily to the western culture of throwing things away. They are uncomfortable with disposables because they instinctively think in terms of possible use, not fixed periods of usage. Educated Indians will routinely reuse gift wrappers, preserve aluminum foil, recycle wedding gifts and diligently peel off unmarked stamps from letters. A million kabadiwallahs make a living from finding something of value from junk. They are willing to buy or sell any junk, from newspapers to empty bottles. Their business premise is simple : everything has the capacity of being recycled, because everyone is looking to minimise costs. It is estimated that 60 percent of India's plastic waste is recycled, compared to 10 percent in China and 12 percent in Japan.

Indians have little option but to be street smart. Indeed, the street is the biggest employer in the country. India has a variable army of 'foot-path businessmen' : small shopkeepers, tea stall owners, dhabawallahs, artisans, barbers and rickshaw pullers. It is estimated that 10 million men and women work as street hawkers and vendors, and more than 60 million people are directly dependent on this trade. The organised sector of the economy - private, public and corporate - employs less than 5 percent of the workforce.

- 1) What has made Indians inventive about improvising on inputs and reducing costs? (01)
- 2) What Indians do not take easily to the Western Culture? (01)
- 3) Why can not Indians throw things? (01)

b) Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions given below. (10)

One bright June morning three years ago, I was reading my Kannada newspaper as usual. It was the day the SSLC the inside had been published. While columns of roll numbers filled the inside pages, the list of rank holders with their photographs took up almost the entire front page.

I have a great fascination for rank holders. Rank is not merely an index of one's intelligence, it also indicates the hard work and perseverance that students have put in to reach their goal. My background - I was brought up in a professor's family - and my own experience as a teacher have led me to believe this.

Of all the photographs in that morning's newspaper, one boy's photo caught my attention. I could not take my eyes off him. He was frail and pale, but there was an endearing sparkle in his eyes. I wanted to know more about him. I read that his name was Hanumanthappa and that he had secured the 8th rank. That was the information I could gather.

The next day, to my surprise, his photograph was published again, this time with an interview. With growing interest I learned that he was a coolie's son. He was unable to study further, he said in the interview, because he lived in a village and his father earned only Rs. 40 a day. Hanumanthappa was the oldest of five children. His father was the only breadwinner. They belonged to a tribal group.

I felt sorry for this bright boy. Most of us send our children to tuitions, to coaching classes, buy them reference books and guides, and provide the best possible facilities for them without considering the cost. But it was different for Hanumanthappa of Rampura. He had excelled in spite of being denied some of the basic necessities of life. While I was thinking about him with the newspaper still in my hands, I gazed at a mango tree in my neighbour's compound. It looked its best with its fresh bark, tender green leaves glistening with dewdrops and mangoes that were about to ripen in a few days. Beyond the tree was a small potted plant which, I noticed, had remained almost the same ever since it was potted.
