Musical scales are vital in composing music. A scale is a series of tones arranged from lowest to highest and from highest to lowest. The most common musical scale in Western music is the diatonic scale. This scale has eight tones that go up or ascend or go down or descend the musical staff. A half step is the shortest distance between two tones on the keyboard. The most common diatonic scale is the MAJOR scale. This scale follows the pattern of WS-WS-HS-WS-WS-HS. WS- whole step HS - Half step The best way to show the relationship of the notes in the major scale is by studying the C Major Scale. In this scale, the first note or home tone is G. It is followed by other seven notes in ascending order. It also has a note with a sharp before it. The sharp helps in achieving the correct interval of half and whole steps of the major scale. In this case, G Major has one sharp which is F#.  Another example of a major scale is the F Major. Its name is taken from the first note or its home tone F. The scale is composed of eight notes arranged in succession. This scale utilizes a flat sign instead of a sharp sign. The flat sign on B helps in making sure that the scale follows the pattern of half steps and whole steps for major scales.
