Week 26

February 24, 2023

Hi All,

I wanted to highlight a skill that we will be starting as a whole school challenge in March. We will be working on the skill of politely responding to adults when they greet students in the hallways and in the classrooms. Our students do great when asked a specific question during instruction, but they really struggle when being greeted in the morning or in the hallway by adults or peers. So we want to brush up on eye contact, saying good morning and responding to the question how are you? How can you help at home? This is a great question! As you talk with your child and greet them in the morning practice the skills listed above. Or if you are out in the community help model and encourage your child to practice these much needed social skills.

Take Care,
Alisa Sims

Conscious Discipline

Tip of the Week

When giving your child a consequence, take a deep breath, let them know specifically what you didn't like, and what you would like them to do in the future. Ask them to say it back to you. Tell them the specific consequence you will give, and how long it will last.

Dear Parents/Guardians,

This week in guidance we continued the conversation of what's in our control versus what's out of our control. Students did a good job of identifying the differences. In order to reinforce this at home, it helps to use the same vocabulary (control), and name ways of coping with things out of our control!

Thank you,
