

So uh, yeah, i'm doing this too, nothing new, same old shit to complain about too.

I basically already left and i've got no place to say a damn thing, because let's be real, i probably haven't been the best person at times both in and out of character, but i feel like i should at least speak my mind and get outta here with no regrets

So, i was in CRC for a while, since i was around 14, nearing 15 (i'm 16 now, wow, time flies)

During my time there, the community has become more of a popularity contest than an actual community, the way i understood before going MIA because Myra's account got taken down is, you don't have access to art, you're not important enough, despite understanding this before i left, i stayed, and it took a toll on me since i wanted so badly to be recognized for a story people simply didn't care for because i didn't have pretty art

I'd also like to note that everytime i'd have no ideas for a tweet i'd be worried people would forget about my characters, there was an immense pressure for me to at least throw out one tweet a day with Myra which is something i'm simply not good at but i was scared she'd be forgotten, and then i was proven right when people i considered my friends (in my opinion very suddenly) had stopped interacting with her with no explanation

Although this specific issue i can write down to my own mental health at the time already having been fairly horrible, and my perspective may be warped since i'm not the sharpest tool in the shed at times.

not to mention people blatantly ignoring me emphasizing on the fact that Myra was easy to mistake for a guy to the point where i had to scrap it for the first few weeks of me being in the community and saying she doesn't and she looks cute & stuff

(yes, yes that still bothers me, yes i know that's a petty thing to bring up almost 2 years after it's happened, hell this entire fucking doc is probably really fucking petty but if i'm going i might as well go out with a bang, even if that's something various people have done and it's not new anymore and shit, i know most of the picrews i used might've been cute at the time but seriously guys)

I'd also like to say that multiple people who have left the community have pointed this out, hell, even some people who stayed have, and as far as i know no one (or at least no one with a big impact on the community, my apologies to smaller accounts, i'm sure your ocs and their stories are amazing) has made an effort to improve or tell others to improve.

I recently talked with a friend of mine about this (said friend is someone who's not in the community but does kinda watch it out of curiosity) and they agree with me. i sincerely hope everyone in this community will do well in their life and in the community, but i'm sad to say i don't want to be part of it anymore.

Moral of this whole essay; try not to be part of a story where there's clearly no space for you anymore, it'll just mess with your head when you don't get the attention you hoped

Oh also, if anyone disagrees, explain to me why i'm wrong in a normal way instead of barging into my dms and getting angry (this is a genuine concern for me everywhere, don't take it personally)

Sincerely, Mystic, aka the admin of Myra, Ryan and Arion Creed.