Fact Checking Sites!

American Library Association (ALA) guide to Evaluating Information

<https://libguides.ala.org/InformationEvaluation>

ALA has put together “Resources for librarians to use to equip students and the general public to identify reliable sources of news and other information.”

ALA’s Evaluating Information page lists the following Fact Checking Sites:

- FactCheck.org
<https://www.factcheck.org/>
 FactCheck.org is a project of the Annenberg Public Policy Center of the University of Pennsylvania, a nonpartisan, nonprofit “consumer advocate” for voters that aims to reduce the level of deception and confusion in U.S. politics.
- PolitiFact
<https://www.politifact.com/>
 A fact-checking website that rates the accuracy of claims by elected officials and others who speak up in American politics. PolitiFact is run by editors and reporters from the Tampa Bay Times, an independent newspaper in Florida, as is PunditFact, a site devoted to fact-checking pundits.
- PunditFact
<https://www.politifact.com/punditfact/>
- A project of the Tampa Bay Times and the Poynter Institute, dedicated to checking the accuracy of claims by pundits, columnists, bloggers, political analysts, the hosts and guests of talk shows, and other members of the media.
- Snopes
<https://www.snopes.com/>
 The snopes.com website was founded by David Mikkelsen, who lives and works in the Los Angeles area. What he began in 1995 as an expression of his interest in researching urban legends has since grown into what is widely regarded by folklorists, journalists, and laypersons alike as one of the World Wide Web's essential resources.
- TruthOrFiction
<https://www.truthorfiction.com/>
 Get the truth about rumors, inspirational stories, virus warnings, hoaxes, scams, humorous tales, pleas for help, urban legends, prayer requests, calls to action, and other forwarded emails.
